Bank Rates Hiked By Canada, U.S.

Price Boost Hint Stirs Gold Fever

Times News Services

Increases in the Canadian and United States official bank rates and uncertainty over the position President-elect Nixon will take on the price of gold set the international monetary pot boiling again today.

In Ottawa, the Bank of Canada announced an increase in the prime lending rate of one-half per cent to 6½ per cent effective today.

The change followed an announcement in Washington by the U.S. Federal Reserve Board that the bellwether discount rate was being moved up from 5¼ to 5½ per cent to bring it in line with other market rates and to counter "the resurgence in inflationary expectations."

The price of gold shot up to a six-month peak on European bullion markets. In Toronto golds jumped 12.10 to 250.77.

Bank of Canada Governor Louis Raminsky expressed the "concern of the central bank over the persistence of inflationary price and cost increases in recent months" and he noted that "interest rates had recently risen in Canada and other countries."

U.S. inflationary expectations were further fed Tuesday by the biggest jump in industrial production in six months, by a 7 per cent spurt in housing starts during November and by further increases in personal income.

Worst Inflation in 18 Years

The U.S. is now in the midst of its worst inflation in 18 years. Consumer prices had their biggest monthly spurt in six years in October and have risen 4.6 per cent in the past 12 months — the steepest rise since the Korean War year of 1951.

After steadying the first part of the year, industrial commodity wholesale prices — considered by many analysts the best measure of inflation — turned up sharply in the fall.

The Federal Reserve Board announced Tuesday that its index of output of the country's factories, mines and utilities rose from 165.7 per cent of the 1957-59 average in October to 167.4 per cent last month. This was the biggest increase since last May. The index now stands 4.8 per cent above a year earlier.

Major U.S. banks raised their prime interest rates on business loans a quarter of a point to 6¾ per cent today, the highest on record.

The rate increase was led by First National City Bank of New York and was immediately followed by Chase Manhattan, Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., Irving Trust Co., Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. and Bankers Trust Co. of New York and other banks.

In Canada the bank rate had been declining in sympathy with an easy-money trend since July 2, when it dropped to 7 per cent from the peak 7½ per cent that had prevailed since mid-March. It declined twice more at monthly intervals in the summer.

Just lately, rates have been climbing back in the money markets. Interest rates for funds on three-month loans crept up in November and moved ahead more sharply in the last two weeks.

Six-month funds were loaned at a relatively steady rate through November but moved ahead this month — an indication dealers expected borrowing to be costly for some time to come.

The price of gold shot up partly as a reaction to the bank rate increases and partly on the basis of speculation that the Nixon administration may raise the official price for the metal.

Increase Fiercely Resisted

Successive American governments have fiercely resisted any increase above the $35 an ounce the U.S. has been committed to pay since 1934.

But the refusal Tuesday of Treasury Secretary-designate David Kennedy to commit himself to defend the present official gold-dollar rate was taken by bullion dealers and speculators as a hint of changing thinking in Washington.

The price of gold jumped 60 cents at the morning fixing in London and 50 cents in both Zurich and Frankfurt. The London free market price was $41.825 U.S., the highest level since June 12, when it reached $41.90. It was $41.70 in both Zurich and Frankfurt.

London dealers said turnover was small. Demand was extremely heavy, but sellers were hanging on for a still higher price.

In Paris, an ounce of gold jumped from $43.59 at Tuesday's closing to $44.28. Over-all volume amounted to the franc equivalent of $3,300,000, up $865,000 from Tuesday. The all-time high for an ounce of gold in Paris was $45.36 on July 5.

In Washington Kennedy indicated that the Nixon administration would consider an increase in the price of gold — among other options — as one solution to international monetary problems.

KEEP OPTION OPEN

This surprising statement, the precise opposite of Johnson administration policy, was made and repeated in several different ways at his first Washington news conference.

Kennedy insisted that he wants "to keep every option open that the new administration should have" both on the fixed $35 price of gold, and more flexibility for currency exchange rates.

During the recent campaign, Nixon said that he saw "no need" for an increase in the $35 gold price. But this statement was usually coupled with the caveat that there was no need "once responsible economic policies are firmly established."

At that time, some observers felt that Nixon was providing himself with an "out," if a monetary crisis were to develop. Twice Tuesday, Kennedy referred to the November monetary uncertainties that threatened a devaluation of the franc.

"Nothing stays static," he said, "and we don't know what will follow this."

In an evident attempt to cool speculative fevers, Nixon's press spokesman, Ronald L. Zeigler, issued a statement in New York which said:

"The subject of any changes in the price of gold has not been discussed and we do not anticipate any changes. . . ."

DEFIANT STUDENTS OCCUPY SORBONNE

PARIS (UPI) — A group of 3,000 students occupied the Sorbonne tonight in defiance of Premier Maurice Couve de Murville's warning such a seizure would not be tolerated.

Despite government orders against the seizure, several hundred police surrounding the three-block complex of university buildings in a pouring rain did not act.

The students milled around inside the corridors of the administrative wing, chanting "down with the police state" and other slogans demanding reforms of the universities.

The students held "agitation day" meetings throughout the day, then moved into the 700-year-old university on the left bank Latin quarter. The Sorbonne was the centre of last summer's riots.

The government earlier reversed its tough line against student agitators and it was thought the turmoil would die down. Instead it increased.

Calm Returns To Commons

OTTAWA (CP)—An early infusion of Christmas spirit Tuesday lifted the Commons out of the week-old battle over new rules into calmer debate on anti-dumping legislation.

Aiming at a holiday from Friday, Dec. 20, until Tuesday, Jan. 14, the House amicably agreed to limit talk to two days o.. a new internationally-agreed system for detecting and dealing with imports dumped into Canada at cut-rate prices.

Herb Gray, piloting the anti-dumping legislation through the Commons as parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister Edgar Benson, promised the new system will permit quick and effective action when dumping causes or threatens injury to Canadian producers.

While MPs on all sides of the House welcomed the prospect, they raised a number of doubts about just how fast and effectively this would be done.

Key feature of the new system, to come into force by international agreement Jan. 1, is a five-member tribunal to assess within three months the dangen or extent of injury as a prelude to imposing special duties on damaging imports.

Until now, such duties have been levied on the general test of whether the imports were brought in at prices below those charged in the country of origin.

"If the dumped goods cause injury, threat of injury or material retardation to production in Canada, dumping duties will be applied," Mr. Gray said.

LESS HOPEFUL

The new system provides "a comprehensive framework within which action can be taken swiftly to counteract dumping."

Opposition members were less hopeful.

"Dumping . . . can, does and will continue to cause serious injury to Canadian industry," said Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary Centre).

The harm will be done before it is detected, and the effectiveness of the new system will depend almost entirely on how well it is administered by public servants being given wide power to act quickly.

Mr. Harkness, a former agriculture minister, expressed the hope that quicker action also will be taken against low-priced fruits and vegetables imported just as the Canadian producers

PEACE TALKS PROPOSAL WITHDRAWN

PARIS (AP) — The South Vietnamese government proposed—and then withdrew—a plan that would bar the Viet Cong from displaying its flag at the Vietnam peace talks, Saigon sources said today.

The change-of-mind came at the urging of the United States delegation of the theory North Vietnam would reject the plan. The flag issue remains in dispute between the U.S. and North Vietnam.

Price Curb Agency Planned

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says the federal government plans to propose a new agency to encourage restraint in prices and wages.

In an Ottawa story, the newspaper says the proposal will be contained in a white paper to be tabled in the Commons Friday on prices and incomes. It says the white paper will be a major government policy statement.

Ron Basford, consumer affairs minister, and his department officials have been consulting leaders in various sections of the economy in the last few months, the story says.

The Star says Mr. Basford's main recommendation will be creation of an independent agency to examine wage and price trends and advise the government on what action it might take.

Fireworks Blow Up

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI)—A firecracker factory exploded in the Rio suburb of Belfort Roxo Tuesday, killing five children turning out fireworks for Christmas celebrations.

Prison Guards Join Work-to-Rule Move

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prison guards and social workers have joined lower mainland Liquor Control Board employees in a work-to-rule campaign.

The Oakalla branch of the British Columbia Government Employees Association started their work-to-rule Tuesday.

Sandy McEwen, president of the 375-member Oakalla branch said his membership "approved the measure and it went into effect on an individual basis.

"Its effectiveness will depend on each individual," he said.

Liquor Control Board employees began a work-to-rule campaign Monday in 22 liquor stores.

Government workers at Riverview Mental Hospital have also voted in favor of working to rule but have not yet started their campaign.

The provincial government employees are seeking full collective bargaining rights. They also seek higher wages providing comparable rates with private industry.

A work-to-rule campaign by the Civic Inside Workers union began today in the Vancouver social service department.

Max Pierotti, the union's business manager, said the campaign was to attempt to force the employment of 10 more social workers and the improvement of working conditions.

The work-to-rule will mainly involve refusal to work overtime.

The union represents 80 of the 100-man department, the remaining 20 being provincial government employees, who have also agreed to work to rule.

CEASEFIRE SET FOR CHRISTMAS

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese government said today it is ready to discuss a "truce arrangement" with North Vietnam for New Year's Day, Jan. 1, and also for Tet, the Vietnamese lunar new year celebration that begins Feb. 17.

President Nguyen Van Thieu already has announced a 24-hour ceasefire for Christmas, beginning at 6 p.m. Dec. 24.

The Viet Cong's National Liberation Front had announced earlier it would observe three-day truces for Christmas, New Year's and Tet.

Hanoi was expected either to ignore the invitation or tell the Saigon regime to talk to the National Liberation Front, in line with the Communist contention that the Viet Cong and not the North Vietnamese are fighting the war in South Vietnam.

This would bring the question of further holiday ceasefires back to its present status, since Saigon refuses to recognize the NLF and to negotiate with it.

'The Jolly Old Elf Has Become a Pest'

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — "Dear Santa, drop dead!" says a Methodist minister who thinks the jolly symbol of Christmas is getting too much publicity.

"Santa's omnipresence from before Thanksgiving has gone beyond the bounds of even mythic decency," Dr. John H. McCombe Jr., dean of the Hendricks Chapel at Syracuse University, said in his Christmas sermon.

Santa Claus, Dr. McCombe said, "is a ho-ho phoney whose jingle is the bell of a cash register," and, because of him, "many people are ready to overhaul their observance of this mid-winter bash."

"Overexposure, I gues you'd call it," the minister said. "His picture is everywhere—literally. Stores, shops, billboards, churches—even a funeral parlor. How much is too much?"

Dr. McCombe, a past executive secretary of the American Bible Society, said members of his own family had reassessed its own Christmas-time practices and found that they "felt miles away from the main event at the manger."

"The jolly old elf has become a pest," he said, "as have his legions of 'helpers' in red baggy pants with their banging, begging bells."

So last year, "we stripped Christmas down to its faith, streamlined its festivities and kept Santa in his place.

"Instead of a quarterback sneak into the living room and a mad scramble to intercept packages, we went into a prearranged huddle in the dining room that included prayers, carols and the reading of the Christmas story from the Bible."

It was, Dr. McCombe said, "the best holiday ever."

SECOND GANG SUCCESSFUL

LONDON (Reuters) — Thieves made a £104,000 (about $270,400) raid on a Pan American Airways cargo shed at London's Heathrow Airport today while police—acting on a tip—ambushed a second gang in another part of the airport.

The successful raiders escaped with diamonds, gold dust and dollars from Pan Am strong rooms.

Meanwhile, Scotland Yard detectives captured three men after a fight near the strong-room of British European Airways. They sent 16 men there after a tip that thieves were planning to rob it of bullion and gems worth up to £500,000 ($1,300,000).

Police captured the men in a BEA truck and recovered a loaded pistol, masks, rope and forged papers.

Later the three appeared in court at nearby Uxbridge and were ordered held without bail on charges of conspiracy to rob.

Security men had checked the Pan Am shed at midnight and found nothing unusual. The robbers got into it by forcing one door and opening two others with duplicate keys, police reported.

They escaped with $75,000 U.S. in cash, nine packets of diamonds and a packet of gold dust.

Police said the diamonds were privately owned and were on their way to Japan. The cash was in transit from Malaysia to New York. The gold dust was believed bound for the Far East.

CHILDREN OF ASIA

Receipt Shows the True Spirit of Christmas

By SUSAN RILEY

Item in Tuesday's list of donations to the Times' Children of Asia Fund:

Stockingstuffers $6

The item was different enough to warrant tracing back to the anonymous donor, a city businessman, for an explanaton.

And the explanation, in turn, was intriguing enough to share with Times readers.

"We don't exactly go overboard with Christmas gifts for our youngsters," the businessman said today. "But they still end up with a generous enough allotment of good things — to the point where I sometimes wonder if they realize how fortunate they are compared with children their ages in the underdeveloped areas of the world, and particularly in Asia.

"I wonder, too," he continued, "if our children don't get the idea of Christmas backwards; the accent is on getting, rather than giving.

"So this year in their Christmas stockings, in place of some of the frivolous items they usually get, they'll find an envelope with a receipt from the Children of Asia Fund and a brief note explaining that at a time when they are generously looked after with gifts they should spare a few moments to think of the plight of others who are not so fortunate as themselves."

So there it is. A simple enough little idea but one which, if multiplied by the thousands of Victoria children who will be surfeited with gifts on Christmas day, could bring the gift of life to many Indian or Korean children in the year ahead.

The Unitarian Service Committee despartely needs every dollar it can get to meet its commitment to the children it has undertaken to feed. A dollar or so given on behalf of a well-fed, well-clothed Canadian child can literally mean that some Asian child will be spared the terror of starvation for several days.

The USC is non-denominational. It originated from a Unitarian church work group 20 years ago but is no longer officially affiliated with any religion.

The USC tries to keep operating costs at 10 per cent. This covers administration and salaries for the small staff in Ottawa. Nothing is paid for advertising or promotion.

All Systems Set For Moon Launch

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Preparations moved ahead smoothly today for Saturday's launching of the manned Apollo spaceship toward an orbit around the moon.

The astronauts, United States Air Force Col. Frank Borman, Navy Capt. James A. Lovell Jr. and Air Force Maj. William A. Anders, climbed into a spacecraft simulator this morning, adding to the more than 250 hours each has logged in the training device.

Later, they planned to meet with launch director Rocco A. Petrone and astronaut Michael Collins, who will be the chief ground communicator with Apollo 8. Collins, an air force lieutenant-colonel, originally was to have flown the mission but was replaced by Lovell after he underwent spinal surgery last summer.

Officials said weather conditions for Saturday's launching were predicted to be satisfactory, with considerable cloudiness, temperatures in the 60s and moderate winds. The forecast also called for good conditions in the major recovery areas.

The lengthy countdown, which stated Sunday night, continued to proceed flawlessly toward the scheduled launch time of 7:51 a.m. EST Saturday.

Attention was focused on checking systems of the giant Saturn V rocket which is to boost the astronauts on their 250,000-mile trip to the moon. The first three days of the countdown concentrated on spacecraft systems.

Borman, Lovell and Anders are to orbit the moon for 20 hours on Christmas Eve and early Christmas Day, hoping to pave the way for other astronauts to land on the lunar surface next year.

Report Supports Landfill Method

The Regional District Board this afternoon received a report from municipal engineers recommending a sanitary landfill garbage disposal system on a region-wide basis.

The report, compiled after several months of study of the latest methods of refuse disposal, suggests that the regional district purchase land for the sanitary fill operation.

It also suggests that consideration be given to permitting a private firm to operate the dump on a contract basis.

Composting of garbage is not entirely dismissed by the six page report.

TOO EXPENSIVE

But the engineers state that the cost of composting equipment at this time is too expensive to be considered when compared with the low-cost of the sanitary land-fill method.

They stress, however, that as cover soil becomes more expensive the day may well come when it will be more economical to go into a partial composting system than to stay with the pack and cover method.

The board also finally formalized its marriage agreement with the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health.

It has been accepted for months that the health group would eventually come under the jurisdiction of the regional district.

This afternoon's decision makes it a matter of official record that the two bodies will be joined with the planned takeover set for some time in 1969.

market their later-maturing produce.

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) urged that in deciding questions of injury to Canadian producers economic factors such as the level of unemployment be taken into consideration.

And those who ship goods to this country should be required to bear more of the burden of proving that their prices are legitimate.

Harold Danforth (PC—Kent-Essex) maintained that through the years every step towards free trade and less protection has hit hardest at fruit and vegetable growers and small canneries and allied industries.

HAPPEN QUICKLY

Injurious price changes could happen in hours or minutes and he doubted that the surtax provided in the legislation to guard such Canadian producers from injury could do the job.

"I feel it would be impossible in many cases for the terms of this measure to be applied fast enough or completely enough before damage is done, before a catastrophe had been brought about."

NEED PROMPT ACTION

Bruce Howard (L—Okanagan-Boundary) echoed these worries. He said he feels the administators weren't sufficiently impressed by the need for prompt and effective action.

He argued that in international trade negotiations Canada too often has taken the attitude "that we can throw sections of the agricultural community to the wolves."

Australia's exemption from anti-dumping legislation was an example.

Replying later, Mr. Gray denied that Australia has such exemption. Consultations were required if injury was in prospect from Australian imports and, if corrective action couldn't be agreed upon, anti-dumping action could be taken.

Alfred D. Hales (PC—Wellington) expressed the fear that Canadian subsidiaries of American corporations would fail to lodge complaints against dumping action by their parents.

Mr. Gray said the government need not wait for complaints or complaints could be lodged by labor unions.

$429 Raised For Y Fund

A Christmas concert organized by Victoria YM-YWCA Sunday afternoon in aid of the Y World Service Fund raised $429, it was reported today.

More than 950 men, women and children attended the concert, which was held in Metropolitan United Church.

"We are very grateful for this result and to all the talented artists who gave their services," said James A. McConnell, executive director of Victoria YM-YWCA.

Two lessons from the Bible were read by Dean Brian Whitlow of Christ Church Cathedral and Bishop Remi De Roo, head of the Roman Catholic Church on Vancouver Island.

PUEBLO CREW MAY BE FREED

BOSTON (AP) — The 82 crew members of the U.S. intelligence ship Pueblo may be released by the North Koreans during the Christmas holidays, the Herald Traveler says in a copyright story.

Wording of a statement on the release was the major topic during a two-hour 40-minute meeting between North Korean and U.S. representatives Tuesday in Panmunjom, the paper says, and another meeting is scheduled to work out details.

The state department refused to comment on the story.

The Pueblo crew members have been in custody since last Jan. 23 when the ship was captured by North Korean warships for allegedly violating Korean territorial waters.

Sidney Plans Yule Party On Saturday

Sidney is being decked out for its annual children's Christmas party Saturday.

The party, sponsored by the Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce, is open to all children in the town, North Saanich and Central Saanich.

The municipalities have each donated $50.

Wilfred D. Price, chamber president, said arrangements have been made to have Santa arrive on a helicopter. He will land at the municipal hall parking lot at 9:45 a.m.

At 10 a two-hour movie will be held at the Gem Theatre for children.

Oranges, candies, balloons and a toy will be given to each child by Santa who will also deliver gifts to children in Resthaven Hospital.

Beacon Avenue, the town's main thoroughfare, is being decorated.

Mr. Price said cash prizes will also be given for winners of the decorated home contest.

Rebel Reds Include Labor Chiefs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nigel Morgan, provincial Communist Party of Canada leader, and party rebels disagreed Monday on the effect a weekend walkout of 35 B.C. members will have on the national movement.

Mr. Morgan said the CPC has 1,000 members in B.C. "and 35 members, if that figure is true, is only a small insignificant part of that group."

The rebels said provincial membership is closer to 200 and the 35 include most of the Vancouver members—some of whom play a vital role in the labor movement and Communist youth groups.

They cited Homer Stevens, secretary-treasurer of the United Fishermen's and Allied Workers' Union and Alan Blakey, president of the Vancouver Elementary School Teachers' Association as examples of dissenters with strong labor influence.

Most of the rebels resigned because of the national executive's "hard line" attitude in its pro-Russian policy in connection with the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Another dissenter, Charles Boylan, former editor of Scan, the Toronto-based Communist youth magazine, said he quit because of dissatisfaction with the party's leadership.

"I don't think Morgan will realize how many have resigned from the CPC until he counts the convention assessment payments due at the end of the year," he said.

U.S. Stocks Night Scope

WASHINGTON (AP) — A device used to pinpoint enemy snipers during night fighting in Vietnam has been added to the weapons provided the National Guard for possible use against rioters in the United States.

One hundred of the devices, called starlight scopes, are being stockpiled at key depots for use by state National Guard chiefs, if needed.

The army has claimed outstanding success for the starlight scope in South Vietnam to detect enemy guerrilla fighters for more than 400 yards.

The device, which is hand-held or mounted on rifles and machine-guns, amplifies the glow of the moon or stars, enabling its operator to see objects that otherwise would be blacked out.

NIXON'S POSITION ON N-PACT 'VAGUE'

NEW YORK (AP)—President-elect Nixon is said by a U.S. diplomat to have suggested he may soon signal that he believes the time has come for the Senate to approve a treaty to control the spread of nuclear weapons.

But officially, the Nixon position is unchanged —and vague.

U.S. disarmament negotiator William C. Foster was quoted Tuesday as saying Nixon had told him the time may shortly be ripe for American action to ratify the treaty.

Foster made that comment to a reporter after Nixon visited the United Nations and chatted with diplomats at a reception.

An American diplomat, who asked that his name not be used, said he doubted whether there could be action on the treaty before President Johnson leaves office and Nixon takes over Jan. 20.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

A ridge of high pressure building off the B.C. coast has given a northwesterly flow of fairly cold air to coastal areas producing a few snow showers. Over the B.C. interior, snow flurries persisted overnight associated with a weather disturbance crossing the province. Arctic air building up over the Yukon will plunge rapidly southward on Thursday giving sunny skies, lower temperatures and strong outflow winds through coastal valleys and inlets.

Tax Rental Pact Works Well, Says Bennett

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

Premier Bennett Tuesday indicated he will march to the Thursday federal-provincial fiscal conference in his usual cadence—out of step with the others.

But this time Ottawa may be happy to see him refusing to join the crowd.

Mr. Bennett refused to show any support for vehement denunciations hurled at the federal government in pre-conference statements by Ontario's and Manitoba's finance ministers.

He said he would persist in his usual stance that a new deal is needed but he's going to this meeting more to listen than to talk.

"I'm a great co-operative federalist," he told reporters when asked for comment on the Ontario and Manitoba complaints.

"I make my statements in our briefs or afterwards, naturally, if I'm asked."

Mr. Bennett disagreed with Ontario's indication that it would institute its own provincial income tax system unless Ottawa gives it a much larger share than the present 24 per cent going to the provinces under the tax rental agreements.

He said the tax rental agreements were "working well" and although he will ask for more than 24 per cent for B.C. there will be no threat of establishing a separate income tax system here.

"We will ask for a larger percentage of the take without double taxation of our citizens," he said.

Asked how much more he would seek, Mr. Bennett said "I'll say that at the conference, but in any case we're not making any statement like Ontario's."

He also tore into the Manitoba demand that the federal government take over the whole medicare program in Canada instead of sharing only 50 per cent for five years.

"The federal government can't agree to a demand like that becuase it's an Act of Parliament — only Parliament can make that kind of change."

PROTECT UNITY

Asked if he was going to Ottawa to help defend the federal government from provincial demands for more of its resources and powers, Mr. Bennett laughed and said:

"I'm going down to protect Canadian unity.

"Our brief (constitutional brief released unilaterally by B.C. Friday) shows that we're out to protect the whole total — not just the English and the French.

"That's the No. 1 point in the brief and all the papers missed it," he said.

Mr. Bennett said he was fighting Ottawa's attempt "to set up two racial groups above the others" in a manner that would make all other ethnic minorities second-class citizens.

"I say no to that and I say never, as far as British Columbia is concerned."

He added that support from citizens is continuing to pour in from across the country but he continued to refuse to indicate the number of communications he's received since releasing the brief.

'Secret Talks Should Follow Peace Parley'

NEW YORK (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger, special foreign policy adviser to President-elect Nixon, has said that four-sided peace talks in Paris should serve as a prelude to informal and perhaps even secret talks between Hanoi and the United States and between Saigon and the Viet Cong.

In an article written before becoming a Nixon aide, Kissinger said there also should be a third forum—an international conference to work out guarantees and safeguards for agreements arrived at in the other talks.

Kissinger, a Harvard University scholar, set forth his views on the Vietnam negotiations in an article in the quarterly Foreign Affairs. At his appointment Dec. 2, he declined to discuss specific foreign policy matters, saying that as a presidential adviser his views should not be voiced in public.

The United States, Kissinger argued in the article, should concentrate in the negotiations on the mutual withdrawal of external forces and avoid negotiating about the internal political structure of South Vietnam.

This should be left to direct negotiations among the South Vietnamese, he said.

If the United States becomes entangled in such subjects as a coalition government, Kissinger said, it will be the one party least sensitive to the subtleties of Vietnamese politics and would be likely to end up applying most of its pressure on Saigon.

"The result," he said, "may be the complete demoralization of Saigon, profound domestic tensions within the United States and a prolonged stalemate or a resumption of the war."

American objectives in the negotiations, Kissinger said, should be to bring about a staged withdrawal of North Vietnamese and American forces and to create a maximum incentive for the contending forces in South Vietnam to work out a political settlement.

Kissinger said a coalition government is undesirable, but stated: "A mixed commission to develop and supervise a political process to reintegrate the country—including free elections—could be useful. And there must be an international presence to enforce good faith."

An international force also would be required to supervise access routes, Kissinger said, for no one should be expected to rely on Hanoi's word on troop withdrawal.

Kissinger also said this international force should be reinforced by "an electronic barrier" to check movements. He did not elaborate on this suggestion, but it echoed former defence secretary Robert McNamara's idea for an electronic barrier in the demilitarized zone.

Further Delay Feared

PARIS (AP) — The Saigon government's peace negotiators were reported today to have made another proposal that the Communists are sure to reject, raising the prospect of more delay in the start of the Vietnam peace talks even if the delegations ever agree on the shape of the conference table.

Diplomatic informants said Pham Dang Lam, the nominal leader of the South Vietnamese delegation, had proposed to the U.S. delegation that only the United States and North and South Vietnam be allowed to display their flags and nameplates at the enlarged peace talks.

The proposal would deny these sovereignty symbols to the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front, the fourth delegation that is to be at the talks, on the ground that it is not a government.

Since Hanoi and the NLF contend that the Front is the only legitimate representative of the South Vietnamese people and that the Saigon government is an American puppet representing no one, the Communists are certain to insist on full status for the NLF just as they have in the dispute over the shape of the conference table.

The informants said the Americans have not submitted Saigon's flag-nameplate proposal to the North Vietnamese in the private meetings that the men from Hanoi and Washington hold to discuss conference procedure. The American negotiators warned Lam that Hanoi might offer to meet without any flags or nameplates, a move which could be dressed up as a major concession although in fact, it conceded nothing of significance.

Bennett's Dates Okay

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday he has proposed to the premiers new dates for the postponed federal-provincial constitutional conference to accommodate B.C.'s Premier Bennett.

The new dates still fall in the first two weeks of February.

Trudeau said his original proposal for early February was a disadvantage to B.C. His new proposal better suited Bennett and he had suggested it to the other premiers. Not all had replied yet.

The conference was scheduled this week but was postponed at Quebec's request because of the illness of Premier Bertrand.

120 H-Bombs In Arsenal Of China?

NEW DELHI (AP) — China may have a stockpile of 120 nuclear bombs, Defence Minister Swaran Hingh told Parliament today.

Singh added that according to information available to the Indian government, China is capable of producing about 40 nuclear bombs a year with a 20-kiloton capacity and is developing ballistic missiles with a 2,000-mile range.

He said the Chinese had deployed 13 to 16 divisions along India's northern borders. But he declined — "in the public interest" — to disclose details of the Chinese equipment or air bases, or whether there are any Chinese missile bases along the 2,000-mile frontier.

The Nation's Business

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS DEbate on changes in the rules of procedure appears destined to become one of the historic tussles of the present Parliament. The most controversial section, which would permit the government house leader to set a limit on debating time for any bill if an all-party committee for the purpose failed to reach agreement, has been denounced by opposition speakers rather extravagantly as destructive of democracy and a gag on freedom of speech. Since the measure may put a limit on the traditional right of members of the Commons to speak at any length on a particular subject, it is wise of the government to allow full discussion of the point. It is one which involves hard-won rights and basic concepts of our democracy.

But it is equally true that the traditional right of members to speak at length must be governed by the practicalities of parliamentary business. The matters that concern Parliament in our times are so many and so complicated that there just is not time available for the leisured oratory of a century ago when Canadian parliamentary traditions were taken over from Westminster. And Westminster, it might be noted, is far ahead of Ottawa in speeding up its debates by imposing time limits.

No corporation board agenda could find room for discourses on the glories of the speaker's neighborhood or his comments on a host of irrelevant topics. Parliament is the most important board meeting in the nation, and it has a work load that will soon demand year-round attendance of its members.

There is more than logic, then, there is necessity, in the government's efforts to improve routine procedures and enable legislation to be introduced, considered and passed with a minimum of unnecessary talk. That urgency, however, does not require the abolition of necessary criticism from opposition spokesmen, or denial of a reasonable time for the public to become aware of what is going on and to express its opinion.

Mr. Trudeau has told the opposition that if it disapproves of the proposed measure—and it is almost the only contentious one in a long list of amendments—then he is open to suggestions for better methods. One cabinet member has already proposed that the power to set debating time limits should be used by the government in two stages, thus extending the opportunity for debate and public reaction.

The new rules presumably will prevail for a long time to come. The government should not hesitate to refine and improve them before they are adopted, in order to ensure that the necessary streamlining of procedures is not purchased at the price of security. We are legislating not merely for today and tomorrow, but also for the unknown future when men and events may require more than ever the democratic safeguards which have been created in the past.

A $600,000 Involvement

GREATER VICTORIA TEACHers have been awarded by arbitration—and without negotiation—a 5.8 per cent salary increase for next year. This is the same percentage North Saanich teachers received by negotiation without arbitration. The increase has also been accepted in Sooke and the Gulf Islands, which tied their agreements to the Greater Victoria result. The figure is generally in line with most settlements in British Columbia. It represents more than half the teachers' original bid of 10.17 per cent and almost three quarters of their revised request for 8 per cent.

Mr. Peter Bunn, chairman of the school board, terms the award generous, and estimates the cost to the Greater Victoria taxpayers at $600,000. Some of this, perhaps half, may be shared by the provincial government if next year's budget rises no more than the provincially allowed 10 per cent above this year's.

Announcement of the award this year, however, seems to have inspired little amicable spirit. It has been accompanied by a forthright statement by Mr. Bunn on his dissatisfaction with the manner in which wage hassles each fall disrupt the harmony which trustees and teachers profess they wish to share for the benefit of the children.

Mr. Bunn, who has announced his forthcoming retirement from chairmanship of the school board, explains that "one is left with no choice but to feel that monetary gain is more important than rapport, trust and mutual respect that should lead to a better deal for the young people in our joint charge." To this charge the GVTA president, John Smith, replies: "He has completely missed the point. Our concern is involvement in educational decisions, not filthy lucre."

The argument over the degree to which teachers should be involved in educational decisions can be highly useful. But it should be recognized that trustees accept two responsibilities when they take office: they should attempt to provide the best education possible for the children of the district, and they should protect the interests of the taxpayers who finance the schools.

The teachers have a right to try for as much as they can get; the trustees justifiably try to keep raises within the going rate. Both sides claim to have the needs of the school children foremost in mind. The positions are not incompatible. But the animosity that has marked relations between the teachers and the school board in this district over the past few years adds a quality to the negotiations and the months in between them that does little to create a good environment for education here.

Perhaps removing annual negotiations from the district level and putting them into the provincial field would solve the problem of the many local battles that mar the background of our schools. Mr. Bunn and numerous other trustees have urged this method. The teachers reject it because it would remove the system by which salaries are raised in one district, which then becomes the criterion for the others, until another peak rises somewhere else. This is useful bargaining, but it is no guarantee that the taxpayers will get the best return for their money. Province-wide bargaining might help to reduce the bills along with the acrimony.

If It's Good Enough for Santa . . .

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL recently reported a brisk trade in false RAh' mustaches, Van Dyke beards and even Fu Manchu whiskers by young men who have to be clean-shaven on their jobs in daytime but who think the hirsute additions enhance their man-about-townishness in the evening.

Let those who consider the practice foppish and foolish restrain their criticism for the next few days. Think of what a similar practice has done for old "Ho-Ho-Ho" for the last few generations.

". . . by golly, he's right . . . his card IS worn out . . .!"

FROM PARIS — By CHARLES BARTLETT

Bourgeois Stability Settling France

SIX months after the "events" of May, France still trembles with apprehensions of civil war, but the gathering forces of the nation's bourgeois stability have made the actual danger increasingly remote. The students are still unpredictable and their radical leaders are still reaching out for the alliance that could give revolutionary meaning to a second outburst. But the potential of the students to ignite the country with an irresponsible gesture has caused the most volatile elements to draw away from them.

Bartlett

Certainly little remains of last spring's widespread readiness to countenance a student challenge of the autocratic government. It was almost then as if the French relished the spectacle of de Gaulle's nose being tweaked. But this tolerance has been dissipated by resentment over the damage that was done.

The police are ready and apparently empowered to settle old scores if trouble flares. The new danger is that they may over-react so brutally as to force a reluctant coalition of leftist forces which are far more committed to the status quo than to the pursuit of revolution.

De Gaulle and his new cabinet, principally the minister of education, Edgar Faure, have effectively acted to pluck the revolutionary blooms. Notions of romantic socialism and of a French society without class antagonisms are deep within de Gaulle and they have inspired him to borrow the jargon of the new left in advocating democratic participation at all levels of French life. He touched off a massive reform of the education system by declaring grandly to his cabinet: "I will place my wager on the young."

Dependent on Soviets

Fresh trouble is least desired by the Communists whose tenuous hold on respectability has been damaged by events. They boldly condemned the Soviets' intrusion into Czechoslovakia, but they are too accustomed to leaning on Moscow and too reliant on Soviet financing to contemplate the genuine independence that would make them a more potent political force.

The Soviets presumably do not desire the revolution that would transform France into a Communist state. The capital of Communism would quickly shift from Moscow to Paris, socialist units would suffer new strains, and the Cold War equilibrium would be lost. So the French Communists talk of legal, evolutionary change and complain about taxes. They are increasingly estranged from the new radicals.

The workers are an uncertain factor because the drama of the coming months will probably centre on the conflict between their appetite for wage increases and de Gaulle's call for austerity. But the May experience has rendered them reluctant to unite again with the students or to look with enthusiasm on the prospect of another long strike.

Some excellent economists believe that France's rising productivity, plus the prospect of rising costs in Germany and Italy will enable the economy to yield wage gains as high as 5 per cent for the workers without creating a new crisis for the franc.

A more immediate problem is the business community, which has moved for the first time towards a confrontation with the president. Businessmen dislike his new prime minister, Couve de Murville, and they resent the liberal thrust of the new politics, but most of them agree that the economy is fundamentally sound and most of them want de Gaulle to remain in office. So their problems can probably be solved by an adjustment of policies.

One useful consequence of the riots has been the puncture of the de Gaulle myth. For the first time Frenchmen dare to look beyond de Gaulle, a prospect that seemed terrifying in the days when he seemed immortal. He has facilitated contemplations of his successor by suddenly seeming less indispensable.

He is a healthy 77 and he should be around for a while. But when he goes, he will leave a strengthened form of presidential government, a civil service with resilient traditions of authority, and a band of politicians with deflated egos. But most important, he will leave a society in which the alienated elements have been isolated by the progress of the bourgeoisie.

Democracy by Anarchy

Financial Times

Freedom-loving democrats took a beating last week from muddle-headed sentimentalists. In the attack on the government's proposals for parliamentary reform, the opposition parties threw out an advance guard of emotional words and archaic slogans which belonged to Disneyland rather than the practical requirements of Canada's second century. Their tattered banners were contrived to camouflage the tawdry ranks behind them. It is distressing to record how many simple-minded Ottawa commentators and ill-informed editorial writers were deceived by the shallow pretence that democracy can be defended by perpetuating anarchy.

If the inescapable role of government in our national life is to be exercised through Parliament, as every democrat wishes, rather than through arbitrary regulation, Parliament has got to be able to keep up with the rapidly increasing flow of business. If obsolete procedures make it impossible to change obsolete legislation, or to initiate new measures for new times, there are only two possible results. Either government will grind to a halt or it will, in desperation, try to operate more and more without Parliament.

In face of the scandalous pile of accumulated business, Mr. Stanfield's opposition to an ordered allocation of parliamentary time is a flagrant contradiction of his democratic professions. Parliament, like all of the rest of us, must allocate its time according to the amount of work to be done. This becomes quite impossible if the business is held up every time some political Granny appears at the door with a long tale of woe about her digestion. Somebody in the household must have the authority to silence Granny so that the rest of us can get on with our business.

In parliamentary terms this authority can only rest with the government, which won its power from the people and will have to account to the people at the end of its limited term. To call this tyranny is to equate the people's liberties with the MP's right to talk forever about anything or nothing — which is ludicrous.

Anyone who reads Hansard knows how silly, vacuous and repetitive most of the debates are. There is hardly a member who would not make better speeches if he were limited to five minutes; and there are many whose reputation could only be enhanced by more frequent silence. If committees are used properly — as they are beginning to be — there are very few occasions in any year which justify more than two (at the most, three) days for any one debate in the House.

So Much Time

The opposition's vital responsibility to the people is not to protract the debates, but to select the significant topics on which the government should be challenged. Since only so much time is available to do so much, the crux of any rules is to use the limited time to best advantage. This requires that the opposition be given a fair measure of time to discuss the subjects which it thinks important and the government might prefer to avoid. It also requires, just as emphatically, that the government should have full opportunity to bring its measures to a vote.

Both these requirements are met by the government's proposals. It would make no sense at all to do what Mr. Stanfield wants and deny the government authority to set limits on debate — by agreement, if possible; by majority decision, if not. Without that, the House of Commons will remain as scandalously ineffective as it has been in the last 10 years. Without that, Parliament will never be able to handle the nation's business in this modern world.

"ME AN' RUFF DON'T HAVE NO ELECTRIC BLANKET. ALL WE GOT IS EACH OTHER!"

Back Looking

From the Times, Dec. 18, 1908.

It is reported that Swift and Company, the world-famous meat packers, are to add to their long list of centres the city of Victoria. At present the company has a large packing house at Edmonton. In Vancouver and Seattle depots are kept for the distribution of their output.

It is said that the company is preparing now to open a similar house in Victoria. A four-storey block is planned, the location being on Yates Street. Work is to begin at once.

'Tremendous Achievement'

"Chronic critics" have incurred an editorial slap, for charging the Capitalist system with "inefficiency and bungling." An industrial complex capable of creating multi-billion dollar corporations and even the odd individual billionaire is obviously operating with satisfactory efficiency for some. Scarcely a ripple disturbs the unbungled operational sanctity of the corporations in whose honor and aggrandizement the political apparatus functions. Bankruptcy of the GM, GE or any similar corporations would be intolerable heresy. These giants along with Big Steel, oil, etc. enjoy very smooth operation.—A docile, contented press along with television and other media render invaluable aid in maintaining the best of all possible images.

However, the rationale of a social system, which tolerates untrammelled power and opulence on the one hand and degrading poverty, slums, mafia crime and napalming (as an instrument of foreign policy) on the other is not likely to escape criticism.

The Times, surely, would not deny the "tremendous achievements" of the USSR. From Rasputin corruption and chaos to a technology GNP that provides a reasonable competence for Mr. and Mrs. Ordinary Citizen in 50 years is a worthy attainment. One might add, accomplished minus the aid of a single million aire-magic-wand. Purely a people's bootstrap operation. Remember, they had a Stalingrad. USSR, China, Cuba et al have problems. Utopia is Utopia.

In closing, a yuletide thought comes to mind. Not one of the aforementioned countries will be soliciting alms from either corporations or individuals for their institutions of higher learning. An efficient accounting system provides for the proper maintainance and expansion of all such necessary civilized amenities. — R. Gibbens, 1205 Fernwood.

'Ridiculous'

I couldn't help but take exception to the article in the December 14 Weekend Magazine re pensioners. I agree we have to bring conditions that exist among our elderly to the attention of the public. But to use for an example a couple who I would consider very well off is ridiculous.

The article states they have a monthly income from the C.P.R. of $571 plus two cheques of $76.50, which would be a total of $724 per month, plus their own home and car. Also they had for many years a summer cottage. The income these people have in retirement is much greater than the average person earns in his peak years even today. So if you want to use illustrations of conditions that exist among our elderly then let the public see real hardships where couples get $110 per month each and in many cases pay rent. They also have medical problems and expenses. Some of the latter could very well have found use for the payment that the Hassalls got for this article. If that was the worst case of hardship we had in Canada, we could very well sit back and feel smug. — W. C. Frobel.

One 'a' Only

I would like to inform you and the general public of the setting up of the "Committee on Dropping the Second A in Saanich" (CODTSAIS).

The present name has a foreign sound to it and is not in line with the level of English spoken in the area.

Critics may say that it is an Indian name but the Indians did not write English and would not have spelled it that way if they did.

Spelling Saanich Sanich would present a more English Canadian aura to the label.

CODTSAIS plans to promote its activities through letters such as this and, following the raising of funds, through promotional advertising.

The level of response following publication of this letter will determine the future of CODTSAIS.—G. Cochrane.

Misrepresentation

I was certainly astounded by the irrelevant nature of the article "Vietnam Peace Talks Govern Future of ICC" on page 31 of the Nov. 25 Victoria Daily Times. There is hardly a full paragraph of truth in the article. Frankly I do not believe that the author thereof ever read the Geneva Agreements document. If he did not; then he or she never should have attempted to write what was published. U Thant has stated: "I am sure that the great American people, if only they know the true facts and the background to the developments in South Vietnam, will agree with me that further bloodshed is unnecessary. As you know, in times of war and of hostilities the first casualty is truth." The article is in that context.

I have files of Congressional Records pertaining to the illegality and violations by the U.S.A. government, sent to me by members of the present Congress of the U.S.A.

They are all open to scrutiny by any wishing to have the truth pertaining to Vietnam. And many, many more too numerous to mention here, but fully as damning. — Wayne S. Huff, 831 Villance.

Do you, or possibly your printer, call yourselves Canadions? I wonder why it is that so many people persist in calling the spotted dog "Dalmation" when he is reputed to hail from Dalmatia? — Catherine Blinko, Western Canadian Representative of the British Dalmatian Club.

The Kierans Style: Disregard Protocol

By PETER C. NEWMAN

OTTAWA — His eyes have the poached-egg look of permanent fatigue, he holds the lowest cabinet rank in Ottawa and has yet to create for himself a permanent foothold within the federal Liberal hierarchy. But in a cabinet advertised as being dominated by young swingers, Eric Kierans, at 54, is the only minister who has taken Pierre Trudeau at his word, demonstrating that he's not afraid to challenge the established order of things, to articulate ideas calculated to stimulate national debate on vital issues.

Newman

"Pierre has denied that each time he makes a remark he does so with the infallibility of a pope," Kierans told me when I recently dropped into his parliamentary office.

"Since he's rejected the purple, that puts me down somewhere among the assistant curates. But even an assistant curate can think and that's what I propose to do."

Angered His Colleagues

Kierans style is to discard the protocol in any given circumstance for an examination of the fundamentals involved. This was true in 1965 when, as Quebec's acting minister of national revenue he wrote to U.S. Secretary of the Treasury, Henry Fowler, to protest Washington's guidelines on foreign investments, and it's true now.

Over the past few weeks he has publicly set out a strong anti-NATO position and plans to speak out on other issues as they arise.

Kierans' outspoken views have angered some of his wary colleagues.

"The boys have become distrustful of Eric," says one of his fellow ministers. "No member of the cabinet likes to have some guy play with the angels at his expense. It's a delicate enough job running a department without having a devil's advocate in your own cabinet."

Kierans flatly rejects the idea that he's only stirring up political trouble. "Hell," he told me, "foreign policy and defence are wide open issues that affect everybody in Canada.

"If a particular view like mine doesn't prevail it would simply mean that I haven't been able to sell it and therefore that it's a lack on my part or that Canadians aren't really interested in the issue.

"The trouble is that in foreign policy for the greater part of Confederation we've followed a line that hasn't been particularly Canadian. First it was British and since World War II, it's been American."

Kierans believes that Canada's European defence commitment has become irrelevant. "I don't think it matters very much to other countries whether we have five or two divisions in NATO," he says.

"We don't count in this kind of thing. It's something like Stalin asking 'How many divisions does the Pope have?' What does matter is that Canada itself can make a distinctive contribution to furthering peace by helping the only international organization that really devotes itself to it: the United Nations."

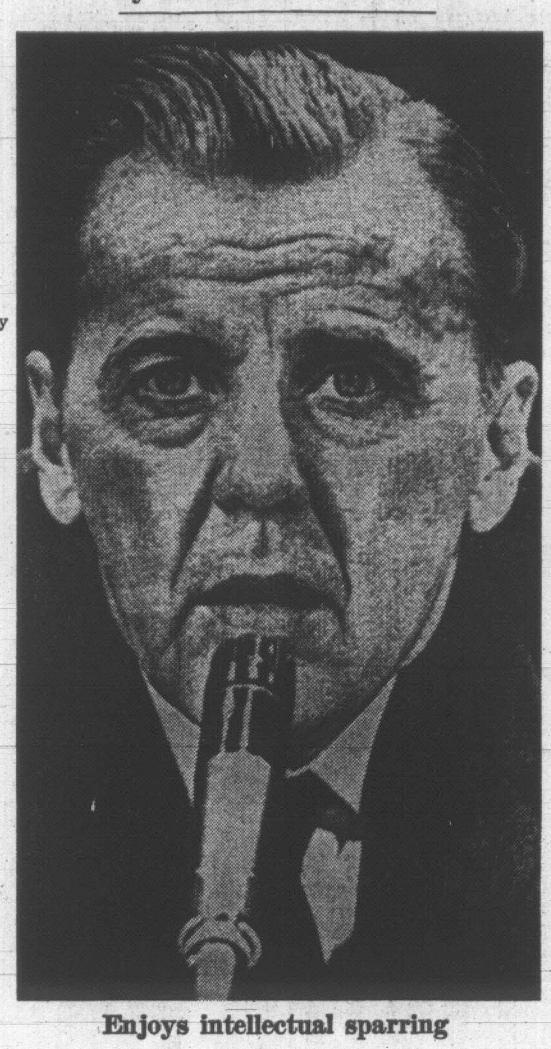
As an alternative to NATO, Kierans advocates the rechannelling of Canada's defence expenditures into the establishment of a permanent UN peace keeping force and a generally increased foreign aid effort: "Expo demonstrated just how rich was the array of talent we can find among ourselves. The question, the choice to be made, is how we can best exploit such areas of expertise for ourseves but far more important, for others."

Kierans is also the only Trudeau minister who still publicly supports the objectives of the Watkins Report on foreign investment but he admits economic nationalism has become a difficult issue on which to arouse public opinion.

Reconciled to Medicare

Inside cabinet he's a firm advocate of the Canada Development Corporation as "an instrument for helping to rationalize Canadian industry."

Although Kierans opposed the Pearson government's medicare program during his own leadership campaign (on the grounds that provinces should be allowed to decide their own spending priorities), he's now reconciled to the scheme as long as the federal government introduces no more shared-cost programs.



Enjoys intellectual sparring

Even if few of Kierans' ideas are accepted, he's not unhappy in the Trudeau cabinet and enjoys the intellectual sparring with the prime minister that takes place in the privy council chamber.

"This is the first group of men I've worked with, in either politics or business," he says, "where I can honestly say that there's been no semblance of a clique pushing forward any particular point of view. There's no lobbying among ministers. No one has ever called me to help them with any favorite project.

"This is partly because Trudeau is so firm but also because you don't express opinions in his cabinet, either for or against any policy, unless you're prepared to say why and can back an opinion up with good reasoning."

Although ideologically he's always been a left-winger, Kierans admits that the Trudeau administration is temporarily at least following what is essentially a conservative line.

"It's like a business," he says, "for four or five years you expand like mad and get the banks pretty edgy about the way your overdrafts and loans are mounting up and then when you decide you're going to retrench and make yourself more liquid, the banks begin wondering why you're not using their facilities. This happens to be that kind of year politically.

"We want to make a lot of new departures but at the present time we've got ourselves into difficulty with the rate some of the shared-cost programs have been expanding and we're pausing before we take another leap. Whether you're left or right ideologically, I think most people recognize this is the most sensible thing to do."

Total Information

Kierans' title is still postmaster general and his communications department exists only on paper. But when it's established, in mid-January, Kierans visualizes it as being concerned with the total information system of the whole country — the transmission and reception of ideas and information whether between people by telephone or between computers through data banks or between the sky and the ground via satellites.

(The U.S. Department of Commerce recently estimated that by 1975 the volume of transmission of data information in North America will be twenty times that of voice communication.)

Kierans hopes Canada will have its own satellite in the sky by late 1971 and investigations are already underway into a second generation of orbitting spheres which will be able to beam broadcasts directly to home receivers.

Although the technical details of his new portfolio are taking up most of Kierans' time, he is the only member of the Trudeau ministers who seems concerned with the theory and philosophy of change — the need for renewal of Canadian institutions in a revolutionary age.

Man Now Vulnerable

"The existential world — do your own thing — places supreme emphasis on the individual," he says. "Who am I? Am I isolated? Is my life to be a monologue? What does my country mean? Can I be indifferent?

"Youth finds little of interest in traditional metaphysical or spiritual values. The young are well aware of how vulnerable man has become in today's society of impersonal organization, unpitying techniques and the creation of artificial wants to justify a mass production system.

"Theirs is a search for a new reality, new values, new communities and ways of living that need not be a flight from responsibility."

Although he is part of a government pledged to the creation of a "Just Society" and attempting to do so by the methods of business administration, Kierans recognizes the conflict between the measurable impact of efficiency and the idea of justice, which is only a concept, an idea, a wish even.

He predicts that the protection of humanism will require the acceptance of a certain amount of inefficiency and is fond of quoting David Hume, the eighteenth century philosopher, who wrote, "Men cannot change their natures. All they can do is change their situations."

Our problem may be," Kierans concludes, "that the challenges we face are of such magnitude that we will have to change not only our situation but to some degree our natures."

Cocktail Party Chatter Dies As Peking Cuts Off Papers

By COLIN McCULLOUGH The Globe and Mail

PEKING — Cocktail parties are the food of diplomatic life in Peking. They offer a variety of political opinion about China and sometimes even a nourishing fact or two. These days, though, the pickings are pretty slim for both diplomats and journalists.

McCullough

Except for "sit-down" receptions, usually given by the African countries at the Peking Hotel, guests simply mill about — with the men talking politics and the women talking about children and cooks and the new clothing that has arrived at the friendship shop for foreigners.

For the last few weeks, the men too might just as well be talking about children and shopping.

Newspapers Cut Off

The problem is that the Chinese have cut off the supply of provincial newspapers to embassies. This is a grave loss, since the newspapers were almost the only source of information to the diplomats of what is going on in various parts of the country.

Diplomats, and correspondents, can now subscribe only to the People's Daily, official organ of the central committee of the communist party. And the Kwangmin Daily, which usually contents itself with reprinting People's Daily articles.

The distribution system of provincial newspapers had been inequitable, with the Soviet bloc countries getting a large number while other embassies could subscribe to only one or two of them. Now everybody gets the same two newspapers every day and nobody is happy.

The move has, however, provided a subject of conversation for the diplomats: Why did the Chinese stop the flow of newspapers?

The ban probably was aimed chiefly at the East European embassies. They were getting the great bulk of the newspapers and were forwarding articles and reports which Moscow used in the bitter polemical war between China and the Soviet Union.

Extreme Sensitivity

The extreme sensitivity on the question of who is the true interpreter of Communism is indicated by the length and frequency of the harsh accusations and rebuttals that fly back and forth between Peking and Moscow.

As usual, it is the bystanders who have been hit hardest. The Soviet embassy, with its large number of translators and analysts, will no doubt switch to monitoring provincial radio stations.

These broadcast important local news and directives and are an important means of communication in a vast country whose population is mostly in the countryside.

A commune, for instance, may not have an adequate supply of newspapers but invests in a number of radios and hooks them up to loudspeakers located throughout the commune.

Don't Have Resources

Other embassies, some of them with only three or four people, have neither the physical nor financial resources to cope with the expensive and time-consuming job of monitoring broadcasts.

Meanwhile, as hard facts become fewer, rumors take their place. A National Day reception a few weeks ago had just begun when the word crackled from group to group: the Chinese had launched a satellite.

Even the disbelievers were swayed when it was learned that Peking Radio had broadcast that a special and important announcement would be made. The satellite, of course, and though no one's admitting it now, some embassies reportedly fired the news to their home ministries.

Radio Peking did have an important announcement to make, but it had nothing to do with satellites.

Nobody Knew

It was, indeed, the communique of the 12th plenary session of the eighth central committee of the Communist Party of China.

Not only had the session been held in Peking, but it had been meeting for almost three weeks. And not one diplomat knew about it.

Since then, nobody has talked much about the satellite.

It's Funny, or Is It?

BEWARE, A GIANT LEAK IS LOOSE

By GEORGE BAIN The Globe and Mail

OTTAWA—The sight of the vicious Unauthorized Information stalking our fair land has the most extraordinary effect on a most extraordinary lot of people.

Now, the Rt. Hon. Swinger himself has the Horsemen after a news girl in Montreal, quizzing her, frisking her parents' home, searching for . . . a cache of heroin? Her Mafia membership card? The radio set on which she's been communicating our national defense secrets (if any) to SMERSH?

Much worse. She set loose Unauthorized Information, to wit the Third Report of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism, and, naturally, the Mounties have to find where she got it.

It's really wildly funny . . . or it would be, if it weren't also rather vicious.

An internal inquiry in the commission is one thing; if it's worthwhile (which is a question in itself), the commissioners and staff could be called on the East Block carpet and warned of the sin of talking. But the RCMP? With search warrants?

One question: If the commission's third report was ready in October—as it must have been for the girl, Lysiane Gagnon, to have published what evidently were accurate accounts of it—where in blazes has it been these past two months?

But other people than the Prime Minister react badly when faced with Unauthorized Information (or the Giant Leak, as it is sometimes known).

Not long ago, Wilfred List of this newspaper published a report of some things the Woods task force (H. D. Woods, Dean of Arts and Science, at McGill) is thinking about as a result of its studies of industrial relations in Canada.

The next day, George Hees was on his feet wanting to know if the Government was going to investigate to find how this dreadful thing had happened. Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey, to his credit, told the Hon. George, No.

The next to react with alarm at the appearance of Unauthorized Information were columnists Fisher-Crowe in The Telegram. If a leak of substance had taken place, said Messrs. Fisher and Crowe, at their twin-keyboard typewriter, "why does the Government dismiss so lightly the quite proper suggestion of George Hees. . . .?

Great balls of fire.

Incidentally, not long ago, Premier W. A. C. Bennett was being openly gleeful about having acquired, by means unstated, a copy of a private survey which the B.C. Liberals ordered and presumably paid for. He even went on a five-station provincial radio network to expose some of its contents.

So far as is known, no cops turned up with search warrants at Mr. Bennett's pad.

Not So Much What You Get As the Thought Behind It

By ART STOTT

"It's only a suggestion . . ." I ventured to the lady.

"Careful," she interrupted, "careful. When you start that way it usually develops that you have an idea involving a lot of work for me and questionable benefits for you. Why don't you stick to your old line, 'How would you like to . . .' and then I could say 'No' and we could eliminate the debate."

Stott

"You don't want to listen, huh?" I asked.

"Not particularly. Not when you get that sneaky tone in your voice. But because of the season, I will. Go ahead."

"I just wondered if, instead of turkey this year, you'd like to consider half a dozen Cornish rock hens," I told her.

"Go on," she said.

"Well, this way we could cook to the taste of the individuals concerned. You-know-who doesn't like all the seasoning in the dressing. I do. And it isn't quite honest to keep telling little Charlie that it's chicken on his plate because he thinks he doesn't like turkey. Then some like a bird well done, some like it a little less than well done. There wouldn't be any hurt feelings over who got the drumstick or who got the white meat. And think of the wishbones. There'd be lots to go around. Everybody could make a wish."

★ ★ ★

"You make it sound intriguing," said the lady. "Continue."

"That's about all I had to say," I told her.

"You've only touched the fringes," she replied. "Let me help you. With Cornish rock hens we could do all you suggest — sausage meat in some of the stuffing for those who like it (I don't), lots of sage and onions for you, chestnuts for somebody else. While the birds were roasting — at different times, mind you, we'd have to put the ones for the well-done fanciers in ahead of the others — we could baste with butter to bring out the brown crispiness in the skin. We could foil-wrap them individually so each would be just right. And when it was all over, we could get a small sprig of holly. You could sharpen the end of the sprigs and write little cards with the names of each diner. Then we'd push the sprig stems through the cards into the breast of each bird before serving.

"That's not all," she continued. "We could have individual containers for the garnish — a small bowl of cranberry for you, whole cranberries that is, cranberry jelly for them as likes it, apple jelly for them as doesn't, and even apple sauce as a further choice."

"You're getting the concept," I said.

"Sure," she said. "Then we'd serve them under glass — one big glass in the centre of the table, all the birds arranged on the platter and maybe red and green twisted crepe paper streamers from the top of the glass to the table corners. Where are you going to get the glass?"

"Maybe," I said, "now that they have the new museum, Cliff might have a few of those inverted bell jars they used to use over exhibits in the old place. Perhaps we could borrow one."

"You're ingenious," the lady said. Then the wheels began turning and she looked at me suspiciously. "This whole deal wouldn't possibly be a plan you've hatched to get out of carving the turkey, would it?"

★ ★ ★

"Certainly not," I replied, and blushed the first blush I've blushed in 30 years.

"Aha," she said, and we fell silent.

She picked up the conversation: "Nevertheless it's quite an idea. Veddy, veddy elegant. But there are a few points we ought to straighten out before we launch this gourmet project. I'll set them out for you: You'll make the dressing, all varieties of it. You'll concoct the garnishes. You'll do the cooking, at various times, in an oven you'll have to get up to 400 degrees. You'll do the basting. You'll burn your fingers doing and undoing the foil wrap.

"What you have conceived is brilliant," she continued. "It will be the second time only I haven't cooked a Christmas dinner in the third of a century we've been married. This is thoughtfulness on your part far beyond the call of duty."

The conversation ended again. The candle of my hope guttered, went out.

She broke the silence in a voice of hard practicality: "Okay. Now we'd better decide where we're going to get the turkey; which store? And we'd better do it in the next couple of days. You had a lovely thought and I had a lovely thought. They were parallel. They somehow didn't come together. Anyhow, what's wrong with turkey? I like it, you like it and little Charlie will learn to like it, even if he thinks it's chicken."

Auto Pact Great

By KEN SMITH
CP Business Editor

TORONTO (CP) — It's been so successful it's embarrassing.

That was one assessment in late 1968 of the four-year-old Canada-United States auto trade pact, and there's plenty to back it up.

The pact has added significantly to the strength of Canadian manufacturing—so much so that in 1968 it came under attack in the U.S. as being unfairly weighted in Canada's favor.

In 1968, for the first time in its history and due to the pact which allows auto companies to pass vehicles and parts tariff-free over the border, Canada's automotive industry produced more than 1,000,000 cars and trucks.

That's 25 per cent higher than in 1967 and double the output as recently as 1962.

From the time the pact was signed in January, 1965, to June, 1968, 98 new plants were built in Canada to take advantage of its terms, the department of industry said. Another 180 expanded their production facilities.

Employment in the industry rose by more than 22,000.

Investment in new facilities totalled more than $765,000,000.

TWO-WAY TRADE UP

In 1967, the last year for which complete figures are available, two-way trade in vehicles and ports was worth $3,300,000,000, compared with $760,000,000 in 1964.

In the first nine months of 1968, exports of vehicles and parts to the U.S. totalled $1,300,000,000—up from $869,000,000 in the similar 1967 period.

In the four years ending with the 1968-model year, exports increased to more than $2,000,000,000 from $123,000,000—a huge shot in the arm for Canada's balance-of-payments problem with the U.S.

In case figures aren't convincing, there's the assessment of Vance Hartke, Democratic senator from Indiana, who told the U.S. Senate:

"What has been hailed as the most successful bilateral agreement in Canadian history is conversely one of the worst for the United States."

He was opposing the pact on grounds that potential expansion and new jobs in his state had been shifted to Canada because it encouraged a continent-wide industry.

Although this view was echoed repeatedly in Washington, there were no signs that the pact's benefits for Canadian industry would slow in 1969.

Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. has announced plans for an overhaul of its engine-producing facilities at Windsor, Ont., and Chrysler Canada Ltd. says it will expand its engine plant in Windsor at a cost of $50,000,000.

LAYOFFS TEMPORARY

Ford gave no public cost of its program, but it has been estimated at between $70,000,000 and $100,000,000. Ford's changes will entail some lengthy layoffs, but the company says it will mean more jobs when it is finished.

In addition to these programs, the industry department says it knows of at least another $180,000,000 in projects to be announced shortly.

Of special significance to the Canadian industry is the fact that these latest expansions involve production—not assembly—facilities. In effect, this is the second phase of the continental integration of the industry promised by the pact.

Not all the outgrowths of the pact in 1968 were accepted cheerfully by Canadian businessmen, however.

Labor negotiations in 1968 saw strikes at Ford and General Motors Canada Ltd. plants, with settlements which included wage parity with U.S. workers by 1970. Chrysler accepted parity without a walkout, although other factors were involved in the Ford and GM strikes as well.

The success of the auto workers in achieving parity led to widespread demands by other workers for wages equal to their U.S. counterparts.

BUSINESS and FINANCE

Sellouts

Public offerings of common shares of two restaurant chains incorporated in B.C. were oversubscribed, underwriters said Tuesday.

Hy's of Canada Ltd., with steak houses in five western Canadian cities, offered 240,000 shares at $5 a share. A block of 15,000 was reserved for employees.

Dog 'n Suds Food Services Ltd., aimed at the hamburger trade, offered 100,000 shares at $4 a share.

Dominion Bridge

Dominion Bridge Co. Ltd. reports net income of $3.63 million or $1.40 a share for the fiscal year ended Oct. 31, compared with a restated $3.9 million or $1.51 in 1967.

Sales were $154.2 million against $171.8 million.

Year-end figures for 1967 were revised downward to reflect a change in application of deferred taxes, the company said.

Western-PSA Offers

Pacific Southwest Airlines' stock offer for Western Airlines is 17.5 per cent higher than the one offered by Las Vegas financier Kirk Kerkorian, PSA president, Floyd Andrews, said.

A merger "would conservatively increase earnings by 10 per cent" and give estern Airlines stockholders an 8 per cent greater cash dividend.

PSA's proposal is 1.8 shares for each Western share, which he said is about $53 a share compared with Kerkorian's $45 offer.

CEGO Profit

Canadian Export Gas and Oil Ltd. of Calgary made a profit of $139,000 during the six months ended Oct. 31, compared with $230,000 for the same period a year earlier.

The drop in profits, on a gross revenue of $1.1 million, was due mostly to increased well abandonment costs.

The company drilled five unsuccessful exploratory wells during the six months and 12 gas producers in the southeast section of the province.

Production of crude oil averaged 1,200 barrels a day and natural gas 17,000 cubic feet daily, about the same as last year.

CPI Sale

A spokesman for Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd. said the company has sold its 581,150-share holding in the Banque Provinciale du Canada.

The shares had been sold to Dominion Securities Corp., a Montreal investment firm, which in turn had sold the stock of the chartered bank to the Societe de Fiducie du Quebec "for clients accounts" with the trust company.

The shares have a current market value of about $6.1 million. They closed at 10%, up one-quarter, on the Montreal Stock Exchange Monday.

Columbia Pictures

The merger of Screen Gems Inc., into Columbia Pictures Corp. is approved by stockholders. The name of the company was changed to Columbia Pictures Industries, Inc.

Screen Gems stock will be exchanged for new Columbia stock on a share-for-share basis.

Shareholders approved an increase in the authorized common shares to 20 million from 10 million and an increase in authorized serial preferred to 5 million from 2 million.

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

It Pays to Agree on Real Estate

By EDGAR A. DOWNEY, C.A.

This is a service provided by The Times and by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of British Columbia.)

When revenue real estate is bought and sold there will be an allocation of the total purchase price between land and building.

It is important for property owners to realize that this is not merely something which should be done, or may be done, it will be done.

The fact is that such a transaction is bound to include some part of the price for land which is not depreciable and some part for the building which is subject to depreciation. It may also include some part for chattels such as furniture and equipment which are also subject to depreciation at a different rate for buildings.

If the seller of the property has ever claimed any depreciation of the building or chattels as an expense for income tax purposes then he should be most concerned that this allocation of the total price be made fairly. And the buyer who may want to claim depreciation in the future years should also want a fair allocation.

However, the seller and the buyer may have different ideas as to what is fair. As a rule the seller wants the largest amount for his land and the least amount for his buildings; whereas, the buyer wants it exactly the other way around — low cost land, high cost building.

If the seller originally paid $50,000 for his property, of which $30,000 was for the building and $20,000 for the land, he could claim depreciation expense based upon the $30,000 but not on the $20,000.

Assuming that he had owned the property for five years and had claimed the maximum allowance for a frame building then his depreciation base would have been reduced to about $17,700.

Then, if he sells the land and building for $60,000 and the allocation is $30,000 building and $30,000 land he has thereby proven that he did not suffer any actual money loss upon his building and the $12,300 depreciation he had been allowed would be subject to "recapture." This means he must pay income tax now to make up for the reductions in taxes he had been allowed in the five years he claimed depreciation.

The solution would seem to be quite simple. Just allocate the total price $17,700 for the building and all the rest of the $60,000 to land. Then there would be no recapture of depreciation because that would prove that he had suffered loss in exactly the same amount as he had claimed.

TAX CONSIDERATION

This would be fine if the new purchaser does not care how much income tax he has to pay. But most property buyers do care about taxes and want the largest amount of the price attributed to the building to give them a larger amount as a depreciation base.

So the buyer would likely want to allocate the $60,000 above as $40,000 for the building and $20,000 for land. It is obvious the allocation problem is a matter of bargaining between the seller and the buyer and it is just as important as bargaining for price.

In some circumstances a favorable allocation may directly affect the total price. A seller who is facing the payment of tax upon $12,300 recaptured depreciation at a 20 per cent tax rate, say $2,500 cash taxes, is not likely to be so eager to sell for the round figure of $60,000 as he would be if the allocation would cause no recapture. It is a pity that so few real estate salesmen take the trouble to understand this when they are dealing with rental property transactions.

It would be east to settle the problem if the buyer and seller could each decide their own allocation but unfortunately the Income Tax Act requires that they must both use the same ratio and if there is no agreement then a reasonable ratio shall be deemed to have been made.

The ratio must always be reasonable. If the buyer and seller, because of the unusual tax position of the seller, were to allocate, say, the whole $60,000 for the building with a nominal $1.00 for the land the tax assessor could show that such a ratio would be unreasonable and re-allocate the price regardless of the form of the documents of the sale.

In any event some allocation will be made by the individuals or by the tax assessor and it is normally wiser to have it settled before either the buyer or the seller sign anything, even before signing the interim agreement and downpayment receipt if any part of the property has been or will be used for rental purposes.

Ad Firm Has Great Faith In Canada

MONTREAL (CP)—New York executive Dan Seymour says his advertising company has the "greatest faith in the ceonomic future of Canada."

Mr. Seymour, president and chief executive officer of J. Walter Thompson Co., said his firm's confidence in Canada has led to the expansion of its facilities in three cities in the last eight months.

In Montreal for the recent formal opening of new offices in Place Bonaventure, he described the separatist movement in Quebec as a "very real problem" but said he expects the province will undergo tremendous economic growth in the next 10 years.

The company, which has been operating in Canada since 1929, found its old Montreal offices too small. It moved to new premises in its Toronto and Vancouver branches earlier this year.

J. Walter Thompson has 52 offices in 28 countries, Mr. Seymour said, and has had to operate in the past under political conditions not always favorable.

LIVED WITH TROUBLE

"I wouldn't say that the climate in Quebec doesn't bother us. But we've had to live with trouble in other countries and have found that business transcends politics. We wouldn't be here if I didn't believe in Canada."

Franklyn D. Thomas of Toronto, chairman of the Canadian company, said in outlining his firm's development that the Canadian operation increased by more than 32 per cent in 1967.

To encourage French-speaking Quebecers to enter the world of business, J. Walter Thompson established two one-year scholarships of $1,500 each in conjunction with the school of business administration of Laval University in Quebec City.

Towing Suit Judgment Awaited

VANCOUVER (CP) — Judgment was reserved in the B.C. Supreme Court by Mr. Justice Alan Macfarlane in Straits Towing's $800,000 damage action against three marine equipment companies.

Straits Towing Ltd. and Straits Barge Ltd. of Vancouver was seeking damages against Washington Iron Works of Seattle, Walkem Machinery and Equipment Ltd. of Vancouver, and Yarrows Shipyards Ltd. of Victoria as a result of the collapse of a crane on a log-carrying barge.

The accident in Malksope Inlet, 210 miles northwest of Vancouver, Sept. 16, 1967, severely damaged the self-loading barage, Straits Logger, putting it out of commission for 22 days. Yarrows built the craft.

The towing firm claimed $213,000 damages for repairs to the crane and barge and $590,000 for financial loss as a result of the tieup.

Soviet School System 25 Years Behind Canada

By PETER BUCKLEY

MOSCOW (CP) — Docile pupils, rigid textbook instruction, badly constructed buildings and outdated equipment —these were some of the impressions about Soviet schooling garnered by a group of Canadian educationists after a brief visit to the Soviet Union.

Fifteen Canadians—all but one from Ontario, and most of them school superintendents —joined more than 100 of their American colleagues on a private study tour of educational methods in Norway, Denmark, the U.S.S.R. and Hungary.

The consensus among the Canadians after nearly a week in the Soviet Union was that in many respects, Soviet education is about 25 years behind schooling in North America.

The group visited almost every level of school from day nurseries and kindergartens up to senior secondary schools and Moscow State University. The tour was limited to Moscow and the west Siberian city of Novosibirsk, with its satellite town of Akademgorod (Academic City), and concentrated on experimental schools and classes.

STRESS ON PROPAGANDA

Several members of he group found the Soviet system of day nurseries — for pre school children of working mothers much more widespread and better organized than in Canada.

But in most other areas, they seemed to find little that could be profitably transplanted to Canadian education.

Several expressed shock or dismay at the heavy propaganda emphasis on nationalism, military heroes and Communist ideology.

Others were disturbed to see the pupils so unexpressive and controlled. The children generally just copied down what they were told by the teacher and learned it by rote. Even in senior grades, there seemed to be no idea of encouraging imagination or original thinking.

Pupils seemed to be crowded into badly-lit classrooms, and technical facilities in even the most advanced schools were often of a sort that had already been discarded in Canada as outdated.

In many classes, instead of a slate blackboard there was a sheet of painted wood. Closed-circuit television and similar teaching aids were still a rare novelty. Laboratory equipment tended to be simple and slightly archaic.

AIMS DIFFER

At Novosibirsk, in particular, relatively new school buildings were already showing signs of decay because of faulty construction or low-quality materials.

One exception to this appeared to be Moscow's Palace of Pioneers, where children between 10 and 14 years of age are given a mixture of ideological training, experience with advanced scientific equipment, sport and recreation. It has a staff of 700 to care for 13,000 children who attend twice weekly for two-hour sessions.

Donald Sturgeon, superintendent of schools in Grey County, Ont., said in an interview that direct comparisons of the results of Soviet education with Canadian are "not too valid" because of the differences in outlook between the two countries.

"They have buildings here called schools, and people called teachers and rooms called classes. But the aims and methods are totally different from ours."

A lean, soft-spoken man going prematurely grey, Sturgeon said he had done some study of comparative education before undertaking the trip.

He believed that in Canada, many of the developments in philosophy and technique were first put forward outside the school system, then introduced into the schools so that the educational structure came to reflect Canadian society.

In the Soviet Union, he felt, the process was reversed—changes were introduced by the state and Communist party authorities into the school system, which then became a forerunner for society.

Therefore, while Soviet schools seemed to be a generation or so behind Canadian schools in many respects, they were still in advance of Soviet society as a whole.

The docile children in Soviet schools would probably become uncomplaining adults, like their parents. But the schools would assure that their formation was designed to further what Soviet authorities regard as a "socialist" society.

Von Thadden Threatens to Expose Nazis in Government

By NORMAN CROSSLAND
The Manchester Guardian

BONN — National Democratic Party chairman Adolf Von Thadden has threatened to publish evidence about former Nazis and Communists in the coalition government parties if the government continues to attack the NPD as neo-Nazi.

Von Thadden made the threat in reply to reports that the West German government intends to ask the courts to ban the party on the grounds that it is undemocratic.

He said the expose of members of the Christian Democratic Union and the Social Democratic Party would have a readership of millions, and added that he had already warned Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger what to expect if the government continued to call the NPD an offspring of the Nazi movement.

The National Democrats would counter continued attacks against them by bringing forward the decisive phase of their election campaign to the first three months of 1969, Von Thadden said.

The centre-piece of the campaign, according to the leader, would be an extraordinary party congress with the purpose of determining the party's political position and removing all doubt that it was loyal to the constitution.

The NPD has been badly stung by the publication of a book called "I Believed in the NPD," written by a former member. the author is Franz Florian Winter, described as a millionaire who was formerly chairman of the party in Bavaria. Winter left the party two years ago, declaring that he would not be jointly responsible "for our nation once again coming under the control of godless fanatics."

The book condemns the NPD as a neo-Nazi undemocratic party. Von Thadden has been granted an interim injunction by a Munich court restraining the author and publisher from repeating certain allegations.

The book may not be distributed until the offending passages have been removed, although the unexpurgated version was on sale in bookshops here Monday.

Von Thadden says that the head of the centre for political education in Mainz, and an official of the office for the protection of the constitution co-operated with Winter in writing the book.

In Von Thadden's view, there was a "timing" between the publication of the book and the government's threat to bring the NDP before the constitutional court.

'Keep Hull in Quebec' Probers Warn

QUEBEC (CP) — The Dorion commission on Quebec's "territorial integrity" has urged the province to protect its boundaries and take particular care of the Hull, Que., region near Ottawa.

Tabled in the legislature Tuesday, the third instalment of the commission's report says drastic measures are necessary to keep Hull in Quebec.

There was an immediate danger that Quebec would lose the region in a merger with Ottawa to form a national capital similar to Washington, D.C.

The report by geographer Henri Dorion, whose original terms of reference were to investigate the Quebec-Labrador boundary dispute, suggests:

—The Quebec government take unprecedented interest in the Hull area;

—The formation of a tripartite committee for the proper development of the Hull region;

—Abrogation of legislation that established the National Capital Commission.

The Hull region should be given the necessary structures, administration and financial tools to avoid joining Ottawa as the capital of Canada.

Such a move by Quebec would scuttle plans of the National Capital Commission.

The Crown agency plans and co-ordinates public lands in the area around Canada's capital, including those on the Quebec side. Involved is an 1,800-square-mile area.

But the Dorion report says Quebec must rebuff "centrifugal forces being exercised on western Quebec" because of its proximity to the capital.

Quebec also had "to check the ill-omened loss of sales taxes" in Hull to Ontario. Preferably, this would be accomplished by some agreement with Ontario.

Quebec has a sales tax of eight per cent while Ontario's is only five.

Quebec's department of industry and commerce should place heavier emphasis on getting more industry in Hull, possibly through incentive meaures, industrial parks and grants.

While suggesting that the National Capital Commission be disbanded, the report says Quebec should seek formation of a tripartite committee that would work toward development of the Hull region.

Such a committee would be composed of representatives from Quebec, Ontario and the federal government. But Quebec also needed its own commission, including a federal representative, that would make recommendations to the tripartite committee.

Quebec's commission would comprise, besides the federal official, municipal and regional representatives. It was a necessity for the preservation and growth of western Quebec.

The report says any expropriation powers held now by the National Capital Commission that are used in Quebec should be turned over to the Quebec government.

Before the Magistrate

A man who discharged a revolver in a hotel washroom and later produced it during a dispute in a beer parlor was fined $350 Monday.

Ronald J. Pettit, 35, of 3496 Savannah, was ordered to pay $300 for possessing an offensive weapon and $50 for discharging it within the city limits.

"I don't think he's criminal but just stupid," Magistrate William Ostler said. "I'm satisfied he had no evil intent."

Court was told Pettit fired a .22 pistol in the washroom of the Century Inn Saturday and left the premises before police arrived.

Later in the Colony beer parlor he sat adjacent to four young men and during an argument held the gun in his lap.

He said to one of them, "What does your friend say to this?"

The four persons left, called the police and one went back and bought a beer for the accused to stall for time. During a conversation Pettit was asked if he had killed anyone yet, to which he replied, "No, not yet."

When apprehended the gun had one spent cartridge in the chamber and four live rounds in the clip, police said.

Pettit told the magistrate he took the gun to show a friend in Esquimalt. He had bought it for target practice and intended to return with it to Whitehorse.

He said he kept it at home loaded so his wife could use it if he was away.

Sgt. John Rickerby told the magistrate the gun was a combination rifle and revolver with a removable barrel and stock. He said it sold for about $65 to $70.

Magistrate Ostler ordered the weapon confiscated.

David N. Stewart, 633 Michigan, was placed on a $250, 18-month good behavior bond following a conviction for contributing to the delinquency of a 16-year-old girl Oct. 25.

Gerhardus Overwater, 19, of 2630 Deville, was sentenced to six to 24 months in the Young Offenders Unit for armed robbery.

Overwater pleaded guilty earlier to the holdup of the Cedar Hill Store Oct. 19.

Gerald Vesterfelt, 33, of 643 John, convicted of the same holdup, was sentenced previously to four years in the penitentiary. He was also given a concurrent term for a holdup at John's Grocery Oct. 5.

Overwater was charged only with the Oct. 19 robbery in which about $20 and some cigarettes were taken.

Terrence Fisher of CFB Esquimalt was sentenced to the Young Offenders Unit for six to 12 months for possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking. He pleaded guilty Friday.

Magistrate Ostler said because Fisher insisted on putting his own views ahead of the laws of the country he had ruined his career in the navy.

Court was told a quantity of marijuana was found on Fisher's ship. He admitted owning it and said he planned to give it to persons in Kelowna for Christmas.

An 18-year-old youth who pleaded guilty to mischief was fined $50 and ordered to make $156 restitution to the owner of a car he was charged with damaging.

Saanich Const. Bill Hillicoat said Gary Morey, 2721 Shelbourne, jumped on the trunk, roof and hood of a car Nov. 24 and later kicked on the sides of the vehicle. A headlight was kicked in and the frame of a rear side window bent.

A juvenile also was involved in the incident.

Lorna McCullough, 145 Beechwood, was fined $200 on two counts of shoplifting on Dec. 11.

She pleaded guilty to taking $14.13 worth of articles from The Bay and a bikini worth $4.97 from Spencer's.

A doctor testifying for the woman said the offence was typical to her normal behavior and that recent circumstances had disturbed her.

Defence counsel Robert Price suggested that shoplifting is not a matter best dealt with in the courtroom and said there should be a different approach.

He said consideration should be given to the effect of newspaper publicity and spoke of it as a "penalty."

Magistrate Ostler said that in fairness to the newspapers he felt their interest was in disseminating public infomation.

Price said newspapers report news or what they think is the news.

William Robertson of Campbell River was sentenced to four months for his third conviction for impaired driving.

Court was told he had previous convictions in 1967 and earlier this year.

Big Townhouse Plan Approved

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Saanich council gave unanimous approval Tuesday night to rezoning land in Gordon Head for a $2 million 120-unit townhouse project.

The decision came in the face of strong resident opposition from nearby single-family houses at a public hearing.

At a marathon public hearing which lasted four hours, council also:

- Tabled for more detailed plans a proposal to build 18 townhouses at 1701 and 1705 Ruby (for sale at less than $20,000 each);
- Tabled until receipt of the municipal Blenkinsop Valley Plan an application to rezone 24 acres at 4508 Blenkinsop for the Victoria Riding Academy;
- Rejected an application by Craigdarroch School to move to 1984 Waterloo.

The big townhouse project, first stage of a 240-unit $4 million plan, will be built off Larchwood Drive immediately north of Gordon Head junior secondary school.

FULL BASEMENT

W. K. Brawnell, representing Diversified Holdings of Edmonton, told the hearing each townhouse will have a full basement, two or three bedrooms, double plumbing and sound-proofing.

The development is specifically designed for couples with children.

The initial stage covers 10 acres, or a density of 12 townhouses per acre. The townhouses will be grouped in units of four and six under one roof

$180 A MONTH

Rents for two-bedroom townhouses would be between $150 and $160 and for a three-bedroom unit $170 to $180 a month including electric heat.

He said school authorities informed him there would be no problem with extra children (this was later confirmed by a school board letter on expansion plans) and that traffic will move north to Feltham or south to McKenzie.

He also said the alternative, if townhouses were turned down, was two long narrow streets with three rows of duplexes which he called "duplications of boxes, they will look like a company town."

Mr. Brawnell said the real reason for local opposition was an objection to tenants — "they don't want people who rent."

"Young people in Saanich with families have no place to live and that is the concept for this development.

'CRUSADE'

"At first I was just the agent for this development, but now it's a crusade. If we suggest tenants are second-class citizens because they don't have a down payment, the future is frightening."

Mr. Brownell said there will be recreation areas, grouped parking, landscaping, two full-time gardeners and the planting of "instant" trees.

Fourteen persons spoke against the townhouses and three in favor.

TWO PETITIONS

Chief spokesman for the opponents was Don McLeod, 4026 Cedarwood, who presented two petitions.

He argued that more children will make the school situation impossible leading to shifts.

The development would also, he said lower property values and stated later a Saanich employee, whom he did not identify, said a survey of 12 areas showed house properties down 2 or 3 per cent when apartments went in.

Both Ald. Leslie Passmore and Mayor Hugh Curtis said this was contrary to information given to council by municipal staff.

OVERCROWDING

Mr. McLeod also said there are no guarantees the development will be as outlined, other than current municipal regulations.

Other opponents also mentioned overcrowded schools, congested streets, changing the nature of the area and one even said the townhouses would attract undesirables and some of them have taken drugs.

Mayor Curtis, saying he was speaking as chief magistrate, noted that drug cases also come from good class neighborhoods and houses.

Council members said housing is desperately needed, that every apartment application gets a hostile reception from single-family house owners, that the proposed development is a good one and a good land use and should be approved.

Council's approval means the development will be the first family-type higher density project since University Village garden apartments were built in 1963.

Soviet MiGs Used to Raid Biafran Soil

GENEVA (UPI) — The Biafra information bureau said Monday air raids by Soviet-built bombers and MiGs of the Nigerian Air Force last week killed 47 persons and wounded 300 others.

A communique said one of two Ilyushin-28 planes which raided Umuahia last Friday was hit by Biafran anti-aircraft fire and crashed in the Cross River valley.

It said two MiG 17 jets raided Umuahia on Friday and Saturday.

In London, British Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart said Monday a Christmas cease-fire in the Nigeria civil war might be used as the basis for a permanent truce pending peace talks.

Answering parliamentary questions, Stewart said he was not able to make any definite statements about such a halt in hostilities.

LABOR SAYS CHARGES SHOULD BE DROPPED

VANCOUVER (CP)—The British Columbia Federation of Labor Tuesday called for an independent committee to investigate complaints about conditions at Simon Fraser University, where 114 students and young persons were arrested Nov. 23 after occupying the administration building for three days.

Secretary Ray Haynes said criminal charges against the 114, who were protesting SFU's admission policies, should be dropped.

37 Employees 'Beat' Prediction Through Safety

Awards for civil service safety programs were handed out to leading departments by Premier Bennett Tuesday but the biggest prize was life itself.

Instead of the 14 employees actuarial projections indicated should have died on government service during the current year, there was only one death.

Insfead of 26 employees losing limbs or suffering some other permanent disability through injury, there were two.

"That's the measure of progress credited to the government's intensive and co-ordinated job safety programs introduced six years ago.

SAVINGS

"In previous years we have emphasized the cost of (civil service) accidents in dollar terms and we have demonstrated the significant savings, of the orders of some $4 million, accuring from the accident prevention effort," said Provincial Secretary Wesley Black at the presentation ceremonies.

"While costs are important, they are only a symbol of the waste of human resources, suffering and loss by employees and their families as a result of work accidents.

"I submit that the alleviation of this suffering is the true measure of any safety program."

Mr. Bennett presented the B.C. Safety Council awards based on man-hours recorded during the work year without compensable injury.

BRONZE AWARDS

Bronze awards were presented to the travel industry, recreation and conservation, and water resources departments; silver awards went to the Public Utilities Commission, public works engineering services and Prince George district of the forest service.

Gold awards went to the labor department, Prince George forest district, and the forest service's inventory division; bronze-on-gold awards went to the industrial development, trade and commerce department, commercial transport department and Nelson forest district; silver-on-gold awards went to commerical transport, Nelson forest district, B.C. Hospital Insurance Service and municipal affairs department.

The top Million-Man-Hour awards went to Nelson forest district, highways department region 2 and finance department.

S. J. Hungerford, president of B.C. Safety Council, also addressed the annual meeting of department heads in the Legislative Building.

ROLE OF COUNCIL

He said the public has a misconception of the safety council's role as "a weather office of gloom only forecasting how many people will be killed on the next hoiday weekend."

He said that while the council does keep and publicize statistics, it is only to spot accident trends that can be prevented.

As an example, he said an analysis showed that in 1965 33 B.C. boaters drowned because, through ingnorance, they went from good weather into bad weather areas while out on the water.

With meteorological office and radio stations' co-operation, the "present condition weather reports" were broadcast four times daily during the boating season covering the area from Comox to Victoria.

"The following year an accident occurred with one small boat with three from the prairies drowned while in 1967 and 1968 no drownings were reported from this cause," said Mr. Hungerford.

"In a similar manner, our winter sports group is compiling statistics for skiers.

"They have found that nearly all accidents in their field occur to the lower limbs and further that the main reason is faulty binding releases.

"In order to reduce accidents they have given this cause publicity and are holding clinics both for skiers and equipment suppliers."

ERECT IRON HOMES

Some African tribesmen build their homes of corrugated iron.

MISTLETOE SHRINKING TRADITION

LONDON (UPI) — Once upon a time girls who wanted a kiss bought a sprig of mistletoe. Nowadays they put on a mini-skirt, mistletoe dealers complain.

What is worse, the mini-skirt is good year-round—not just at Christmas, said mistletoe dealer Cecil Dixon of London's Covent Garden market.

"The mini-skirt is pushing mistletoe out," he said.

"It's a fast-disappearing thing now that people have sex all the year round.

"The demand is nothing like 10 years ago and much less than even a year ago."

Two Hotels Shaken by Explosions

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Two unexplained explosions an hour apart shook two hotels in the twin cities of Kitchener and Waterloo Tuesday night. There were no injuries.

The first occurred in the Station Hotel in Kitchener in a hallway adjacent to a washroom and beer parlor, damaging two doors.

The second, in a small room next to a beer parlor in the Waterloo Hotel, blasted a hole in the ceiling and caused an estimated $4,000 damage.

Our suburbs twinkle, and this happy fact marks a new approach to Christmas decorating. There was a time when few Victorians other than those entered in outdoor lighting contests strung bright globes in December. But the practice is becoming general, and it's a rare block that doesn't offer at least one spangle of color to glow against the dark.

It used to be that housee aves and evergreens were considered the only appropriate backgrounds for lighting. Now, some of the most eye-catching effects are produced by a free-style application of lights to the stark limbs of deciduous trees.

Watch for these on your evening rounds. They're purely lovely.

Our lighting performance — which never manages to catch up with our ambitions — hasn't extended that far, but this year we have taken the idea indoors.

We searched out a Japanese maple bough with numerous forks, trimmed to to length, and mounted it on a wooden base.

Then we clipped miniature lights — 35 of them — to its twigs, and set the assembly where no passerby would become entangled in it.

We're pleased with it, but a world of caution about those needle-nosed miniature globes. They're delicate and finicky. Make sure you test them before purchase.

When busy Peter Bunn and I meet, it is usually in the supermart where our wives do their shopping. There, while the grocery carts come and go, we have discussed and occasionally argued about a public school system which stands in this man's debt.

He will serve it still, but as a trustee rather than as the sturdily outspoken chairman of Greater Victoria school board. I'm sorry that he's stepping down, and engaged his ear long enough on Tuesday to tell him so.

"It's a tremendous sort of job for a small working boy to do," said Peter Bunn, a general contractor by trade.

This year, he told me, education functions of one sort or another have intruded into 190 of his days. In one month, school board work took him off the job or out on an evening 22 times.

"But it isn't just that I think my family and my work shouod see more of me," he said. "I think the board might benefit from a change of pace, and perhaps a year or two of the softer approach."

At Monday night's board meeting, Peter Bunn had spoken with considerable feeling about the annual haggle over teachers' salaries. But this recurring tussle, he insisted, isn't his reason for abandoning the chairmanship he has held for over two years.

His message to parents: "There's an enormous need for teaching — survival depends on education."

And his warning to teachers: "You can't talk of professionalism while going in to bargain like the IWA."

For reasons thay you will understand, I didn't mention the fact that two Canada geese had taken up winter residence on University of Victoria campus.

Through several weeks, they stayed close together, a pair of grand grey and black migrants near the edge of the rain-drenched soccer field.

They became a familiar sight to students and others using the ring road. We got used to seeing them there, apparently feeding on the green grass, and entirely unconcerned by the flow of traffic.

Nobody interfered with them until last Sunday. Then, as a Monday news story revealed, two men got out of a car, believed to carry Illinois licence plates, and blasted them with shotguns.

To all appearances, the birds were a goose and a gander that had dropped out of their southward flight, perhaps because of an injury to one or the other. Mated, the big Canadas are loyal until death.

A sad end to a pair of noble waterfowl who found sanctuary in our city. May their flesh stick in the "hunters'" throats!

GERRY AND ISABEL JOHNSON
. . . journey of hope

Royston Man Leaves For Houston Jan. 2 To Get New Heart

By MORGAN MacGREGOR

Confirmation was received at St. Joseph's Hospital in Comox Tuesday that 43-year-old Gerry Johnson of Royston will leave for Texas Jan 2 to get a new heart.

Dr. Marcos Villaneuva received a call from heart surgeon Denton A. Cooley of St. Luke's Hospital in Houston saying the transplant will proceed as soon after that date as a donated heart is available.

Mr. Johnson, father of two, remains in hospital at Comox where he will be built up for the operation.

Johnson, who was a boom foreman with Crown Zellerbach Ltd., has been on half salary with the company ever since he became bed-ridden two years ago.

WIFE GOING

He and his wife Isabel said they still have no idea what the operation will cost, but contributions from his company and from fellow employees have now made it possible for Mrs. Johnson to accompany her husband to Texas.

This will enable her to remain there in a hotel until he is well enough to return home.

The Comox District Free Press received numerous calls Tuesday asking where contributions could be made.

Phillip Bickle, son of the publisher, set up a trust account at the Imperial Bank of Commerce late Tuesday afternoon.

Tonight Kinsmen will hold a bingo with all proceeds going to the Johnson fund.

This will be the first major trip for the Johnsons out of Canada except for a short visit to Cleveland, Ohio, two years ago where an artery transplant had been planned but was cancelled.

Mrs. Johnson said B.C. Hospital Insurance Service coverage will assist to the extent of what it would pay in B.C. hospitals, which is only a fraction of the costs in most U.S. hospitals.

'TERRIFIC COST'

"The cost is apparently terrific," said Mrs. Johnson, "but in the rush to make preparations we never had a chance to find out exactly what it will cost."

She believes Medical Services Association, the company medical insurance carrier, will also assume part of the costs.

Dr. Villaneuva, the Johnson's family doctor at Courtenay, who came from the Philippines four years ago, made all arrangements with Dr. Cooley after applying by letter.

He was unavailable for comment, but Mrs. Johnson said she believed the doctor had applied to Dr. Cooley because of the high percentage of successful transplants undertaken at the Houston hospital by the Cooley team.

It was thought that Mr. Johnson's condition was such that he would respond well to a new heart and no other course of treatment was open to him.

Alderman Against More Crystal Debate

A bid to re-open debate on the future of the Crystal Garden is expected to get a cool reception from city council Thursday.

Thomas Christie, due to be sworn in as alderman in January, has requested that no further decisions on the Crystal be made until he takes his place on council.

In a letter to city clerk Morran Waller he asks that "in view of the controversy regarding the whole matter at the time of the municipal elections, and my stand during the campaign" the matter should be tabled until the first council meeting of 1969.

OPPOSES DELAY

Mr. Christie was referring specifically to a Monday decision that the Royal London Wax Museum be given two years' notice to vacate its Crystal Garden premises.

Ald. Percy Frampton, chairman of the city's recreation and community services committee, indicated today that he would oppose any move to delay action.

"It seems kind of foolish to me to be beating the bushes on an issue which was decided after debate so long ago," he said.

The decision to phase out the Crystal as a swimming pool and to demolish it after a new pool was built was made on March 8 this year by the recreation and community services committee.

The committee decision was ratified by full council on March 14.

Both decisions were made after months of study and debate in committee sessions.

CAREFUL STUDY

In presenting his recommendations to committee and council Ald. Frampton said careful study had been given to reports which indicated that the Crystal could be saved.

One report stated that a complete overhaul would cost $568,950.

Subsequent discussions revealed that the total price to renovate the Crystal completely would be approximately $750,000.

Planning Group Asks $100,000

A provisional budget of almost $100,000 was presented Tuesday to the Capital Region Planning Board.

This compares with the 1968 budget of $94,135. The final budget for 1969 will come in the new year.

The provisional budget shows that three-quarters of expenditures are for staff salaries. Next highest expenditure is $7,400, for rent of the office at Bastion Square.

HE HAD ALL OUR NUMBERS

By PETE LOUDON

Yes, Victoria, there is a Father Hendricks.

He is alive and well in Kipalapala, near Tabora, Tanzania, East Africa.

The Times talked to him there at 2:30 a.m. today.

He used a Victoria telephone book to obtain addresses of 58,500 Victorians whom he recently sent appeals for funds.

The phone book had been sent to him by a sympathetic Victoria correspondent Henry Walboomers, a city department store worker.

Father Nico Hendriks said also that he is aware an official of the Catholic Church here, Monsignor Michael T. O'Connell had cabled church authorities in East Africa seeking information on the fund appeal.

Official Approval

"The archbishop here has answered that it is okay," Father Nico shouted over the noisy and wavering phone network. He said his Tanganyika Mission Press is a project operated with the blessing of the Bishop of Tanganyika.

He said of his campaign to raise funds for additional machinery for publishing school books and periodicals, "I wish we will have success" in the Victoria drive.

The local campaign has been subject to constant questioning by the public since the letters arrived here last week. "Dozens and dozens" of calls were made to Better Business Bureau.

Radio hot line programs discussed whether the drive was authentic or a racket and no one knew whether or not the mission press was operated as a non-profit business, as Father Hendrik claims.

Nothing Sinister

Mr. Walboomers told the Times today he had wished to remain anonymous but reports that he could not be identified had given a sinister ring to his connection to the drive.

He said he had corresponded with Father Hendrik for several years after first learning of his work in Tanzania native education on a radio program.

The idea of a Victoria campaign was evolved by Mr. Walboomers and Father Hendriks after the priest learned of the size of Victoria and the generosity of Canadians.

'Nice Size'

"Vancouver, Toronto or Montreal would have been too big. Places of the size of Sidney would have been too small. Victoria seemed to be a nice size," said Mr. Walboomers.

Monsignor O'Connell, rector of St. Andrew's Cathedral here, said a cable arrived Tuesday night from Archbishop Marcus Mihayo of Tabora.

It said that the heirarchy of bishops of Tanzania is generally behind the TMP and gives approval to the Christmas appeal made to Victoria.

"There's no doubt it's a worthy cause," said Mons. O'Connell and he urged its support.

The Times began attempts to contact Father Hendriks last Saturday. One obstacle was a 10-hour time difference which meant calls made by day from Victoria were unanswered in the mission office.

Calls which were advanced through Montreal and London overseas operators by night Saturday, Sunday and Monday were frustrated by a series of line interruptions involving downed wires and telephones "out of order."

THEY LIKE THE WHEELS

Supermarts Lose 50 Carts Weekly

By GEORGE COCHRANE

Husbands wanting barbecue grills, wives needing laundry carriers, children building soap-box racers.

They all mean headaches for supermarket managers.

Because they all have their eyes on his shopping carts.

The thieves are seeking mostly the wheels and the rear stainless steel grill.

Stores in Greater Victoria report losing up to 50 carts weekly. Most are found by store employees within blocks while others are brought in from points as far as five miles away. But others seem to vanish completely.

From two to 30 carts are written off annually by individual stores at an average cost of $50 each.

Police on their rounds and repairman servicing private houses often provide a tip-off as to where the buggies have ended up. People have been known to wheel a cart home and then phone the shop to say they have "found" it.

So far there is no law making it illegal to leave store premises with a shopping cart. Stores are entitled to prosecute offenders for theft but shy away from the publicity involved.

Sleep Gun To Control Roaming Dogs

North Saanich has decided to buy a tranquilizer rifle to bring down dogs running at large.

The decision was reached after council ruled a crackdown on unleashed dogs was overdue. But so far no one knows where to get the sleep gun.

Municipal clerk Michael Allen said today he has asked Sidney RCMP for informaton.

"We've got a big problem with marauding dogs in this area," said Mr. Allen. "Council has instructed the dog-catcher to take court action against dog owners who do not abide by the bylaw."

He said North Saanich had a dog population of over 1,000 but only 209 owners had taken out licences last year.

Licence fees are $4 for a male and spayed female.

Pet Law Approval Monday

It took nearly two years.

But finally the new animals bylaw in Saanich is within a week of approval.

Final reading of the 22-page document is expected at a special meeting Monday night.

The first change most Saanich residents will notice will be increased dog licence fees.

The new rate is $5 for male dogs, $5 for spayed females and $15 for unspayed females. Cats continue to be tax-free.

The old licence fee was $4 for male dogs, $4 for spayed females and $6 for unspayed females but there was a reduction of $1 if paid on or before March 31.

If the new bylaw receives final reading this Monday, as expected, Saanich dog owners must get new licences before Feb. 1. The licences are valid for the full calendar year.

LIMITS

Another feature of the bylaw is the introduction, for the first time, of a limitation on the number of cats and dogs which may be kept in a house.

The limit is three dogs over the age of six months. For the fourth and fifth dogs, a permit is necessary. Beyond five dogs will require a commercial kennel licence.

For cats, the limit is five over the age of four months. A permit will be necessary to keep more than five cats.

The decision to revamp the animals bylaw sprang from an old Saanich problem, uncontrolled and roving dogs. Sections of the new bylaw have restrictions on this aspect.

THREE MEETINGS

A draft bylaw was circulated in February, 1967, and three full scale public meetings were held during the year.

Since then the bylaw has been considered at a number of meetings of lands and planning committee, and at council, and was put into official form by municipal officials including solicitor D. A. M. Patterson.

Council voted its approval May 6 and sent the tentative bylaw to Mr. Patterson for formal drafting.

The bylaw's progress was steered by municipal planner Tom Loney, who took charge following the death of the chief inspector of services, David Smith.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you give me some information on the following: 1. How are jurors picked, that is, from where are the names chosen? 2. If a person serves on one case, are they eligible to serve on any following cases? 3. Is there any law for the employer to make up the difference in pay?—C. C.

A. 1. From the voters list; 2. Yes. It is up to the lawyers involved in selecting the jury; 3. No, although most employers do so.

Q. Where did the term funky originate and what does it mean?

A. Funky is defined in the Dictionary of Slang as meaning afraid, timid, very nervous. It started as a colloquial expression about 1837 when a poet wrote "The remaining Barkingtonians were less funky and made some fair scores."

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Malahat Strip To Be Studied By Specialists

Safety Body Acts After Eighth Death

A study of how accidents can be prevented on the Malahat has been launched by the Greater Victoria and District Traffic Safety Council.

Eight lives have been lost on the treacherous stretch of the Trans-Canada Highway this year.

The council's general manager, Dennis Wagner, and assistant, John Reeves, will present a preliminary report to the council's executive by Feb. 4, it was decided Tuesday.

Their study will include highways in the Colwood-Langford-Sooke district as well, Mr. Wagner said.

Recommendations will be made under the headings enforcement, education and engineering.

Mr. Wagner said specialists in each area will be called upon to advised the study group.

Special attention will be paid reports of accidents that have occurred to see if patterns emerge.

Of the Malahat deaths this year, at least three occurred while people were travelling to work.

Safety Push Requested In Schools

A brief on driving safety was presented to the provincial government Tuesday by B.C. members of the All Canada Youth Council.

Led by University of B.C. student Marillia Neto, the delegation presented a brief to Attorney-General Leslie Peterson containing recommendations passed last summer at the All-Canada conference of young drivers in Montreal.

The brief recommended the provincial education department implement a full safety education program in schools, including universal driver education programs.

It also suggested that driving licences be probationary and that the new drivers be subject to re-examination after one year.

On law enforcement, the brief said defendants in traffic cases should appear personally in court and that devices designed to warn motorists of radar be prohibited by law.

28 More Nabbed For Careless Walking Habits

Another 28 Victorians were to be summonsed after failing to obey "Don't Walk" signs downtown Tuesday.

Police said the switch from warnings to fines ($2.50) is bringing noticeable results in safer pedestrian habits.

Greater Victoria and District Safety Council, noting that Defensive Walking Week is now half over, is optimistic the street accident rate will be reduced between now and Christmas.

But the council points out celebrating pedestrians are a growing problem.

"We hear much these days regarding impaired drivers ..... but don't overlook that the impaired pedestrian also is guilty of unpredictable traffic behavior. He can and does cause accidents."

The council stopped short of sloganizing, "If you drink, don't walk" . . . but the council says death and injury statistics each year underline the perils.

DEATH ROCK WENT 440 FEET THROUGH OPENING IN TREES

No blame can be attached to anyone in the rock blasting death of Lars Oke Linell last Thursday near Sooke, Coroner Eugene Murphy has ruled.

"It was entirely accidental. He took what should have been sufficient precautions," said the coroner following an enquiry.

He said Mr. Linell, 59, was struck by a huge rock while assuming a station to halt approaching traffic on Muir Creek Road.

The rock travelled 440 feet over a hill. Mr. Linell had stationed his truck in a place of shelter behind a treed bluff.

By a freak occurrence the rock travelled through a three-to-four-foot opening between the trees, smashing through the truck's windshield before striking the driver.

Subdivision, Park Among Proposals For Indian Lands

By ROGER STONEBANKS

A leasehold subdivision of 90 acres on prime waterfront in a North Saanich Indian reserve is envisioned in a planning report made public Tuesday.

Prepared by the Capital Region Planning Board at the request of the Pauquachin band at Coles Bay, west of John Dean Park, and flanking West Saanich Road, the report seeks to show present and future land use requirements as they relate to the human development of the Pauquachins.

The leasehold subdivision for white persons is one of a number of land uses mentioned in the report. Others include a 125-acre regional park, improved education program, community centre, tourist trailer and camping site and riding academy as well as an area for band housing.

The Pauquachin reserve has an area of 700 acres and a population of only 130.

The proposed leasehold area — where the resident would own the house but lease the land underneath from the owners, the Indians — would be off West Saanich Road.

The report said the area is well suited for single-family houses.

Main attractions would be the waterfront area and proximity to the proposed regional park.

It was anticipated the leasehold subdivision could start in five years, expecially because waterfront lots are next to impossible to obtain in the region.

What lies behind the report, with its proposal for the waterfront leasehold subdivision, is the fact that Indians are poor but their land is rich.

"All band leaders are striving and looking for social equality," Pauquachin chief Don Williams told the planning board.

● ● ●

"The only way we can get financial support is to capitalize on our land holdings."

Board chairman Gordon Lee replied, "We agree with you. It's a very progressive step."

After the meeting, Chief Williams said leasehold housing has already occurred at the Musqueam reserve in Vancouver.

"We need capital to provide good homes for our Indians. We can do this by leasehold," he said.

He pointed out, however, that at present there is no sewer and no water system for leasehold houses and there would be no move until Indians see the revised federal Indian Act.

A future residential area mentioned in the report in 25 or 30 years would cover 300 acres east of the West Saanich Road.

Estimated income from proposals in the report, including leasehold housing, would start at $20,750 next year rising to $70,300 in 1978.

The leasehold plan would generate $7,000 in 1972 rising to $26,000 in 1978.

The poverty of Indians and the wealth of their land was highlighted by Tony Roberts, director of the Capital Region Planning Board.

Of the 190,000 residents on southern Vancouver Island, 1,100 live on reserves.

"These people live in some of the worst housing, have the lowest levels of health and education and the highest rate of unemployment of any citizen group," he said.

● ● ●

"Yet, paradoxically, the Indian people in the eight bands in this region can also be counted among our richer citizens.

"Their land consists of 4,000 acres of the most desirable real estate including large tracts of waterfront property. At a conservative estimate this land is worth $11 million, or $10,000 for each man, woman and child.

"These two contradictory facts of social privation and wealth of resources point the way to the two fundamental steps required to achieve real progress in the Indian communities.

"The first is to plan and develop land so that its potential can be converted into cash.

"The second step is the preparation and carrying out of a program to commit these earnings for social and economic improvement.

"The terms of reference of this report are to provide a plan for the realization of step number one for the Pauquachin community of 130 persons. Step number two, which incidentally is more difficult than step number one, must follow."

One startling fact which illustrates the poverty of Indians is given in the report.

Quoting from a 1966 survey of Indians in Canada, the report says the average per capita income in Canada was $1,400.

But the per capita income of an Indian person was about $300.

● ● ●

"The main causes are employment in low-paid industries and occupations along with many persons underemployed," the report said.

"The number of persons unemployed for all the Indian communities in the region is approximately 23 per cent compared with 4 per cent for those persons registered at the Victoria Manpower Centre.

"Another factor in low per capita income figures is the large proportion of the Indian population below working age. For example, in June, 1966, 55 per cent of the Indian persons in the region were under 19 years of age compared with 35 per cent in the general population.

"The effective work force (those persons actually living in the Indian community at any one time and not those persons living away from it) of the total Indian population is 17 per cent compared to the region's work force of 36 per cent."

Florida Racing Gets Order From the Judge

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A Dade County circuit judge has ordered the Florida racing commission to issue Barbara Jo Rubin a jockey's licence or show cause why it shouldn't.

Judge Jack Falk's order came after he heard arguments on the petition by the pretty brunette teen-ager, who claims she can't be a jockey because she's a girl.

Barbara Jo's petition, filed last Friday, claimed the commission violated her rights by discriminating against her because of her gender.

Judge Falk told the commission to act on her application at a Jan. 10 meeting or be prepared to show cause at a hearing tentatively scheduled for Jan. 15.

After Veeck Racing Won't Ever Be Same

By GERALD STRINE
The Washington Post

Bill Veeck is back. This time racing's got him and the thoroughbred sport will never be the same again.

Realty Equities Corp. is about ready to purchase Suffolk Downs racetrack in East Boston, Mass. The price is 12 million dollars. Veeck will become president and chief executive officer. Dave Haber, the owner of a fleet of New York taxicabs, who almost drove Suffolk Downs into the ground, will become chairman of the board. He knows what happens to people who get in the way of fast-moving objects.

Veeck was off and running on his new job this past week, spreading the word to every Middlesex village and farm in New England that Suffolk Downs opens April 19 under new management.

"Racing is terribly defensive," he told the Yankeeland press, television, radio and persons who attend his numerous speaking engagements. "There's too much apologizing done by people in racing. Why? It's a perfectly legitimate business. It's entertainment on a big scale. No apologies are necessary. Certainly there'll be none from me."

Veeck's typical work day in New England started at 10:30 a.m. and ended at 2:30 a.m.

●

"He's the greatest thing ever to hit Boston racing," one track executive remarked, then quickly added: "Hell, he'll be the greatest thing to ever happen to United States racing."

From another source came word that the main topic of conversation at the recent convention of the Thoroughbred Racing Association in New York was not butazolidin or Sunday racing, but Veeck, as in "could he possibly wreck the good thing we have going?"

Late in the week, contacted at his Easton, Md., home, Veeck had to chuckle when asked if baseball's search for a commissionner might sidetrack him at the last moment from his new business endeavor.

"I see they want unanimity in their selection of a new commissioner," he replied. "Well, I'd come pretty close to giving them that. Of the 24 owners, they might be able to get 24 votes against me. Well, not really 24, but pretty close.

"No, I'm definnitely headed for racing. I've had some solid offers from baseball clubs in the past 18 months and, frankly, I now find baseball a little too dull. I've wanted to try something new and exciting. There's great potential in racing. I intend to make a good product, then sell it, before any gimmicks, just as I did in baseball.

"We'll sell horse racing, not gags or gimmicks, but we intend to make it as interesting as possible. What's wrong with that?

"They tell me it's not going to be easy to entertain a fan who is losing his money. Well, I had the St. Louis Browns. Remember them? They'd lose by a score of 11-2 11 days in a row."

●

Veeck always found the baseball hierarchy too conservative for his taste. In switching to racing he joins a group whose business philosophy is about two giant steps to the right of that of the baseball moguls. Racing and Ronald Reagan go well together.

"That may be," Veeck, said, "but in baseball there were 23 other owners to contend with. In racing, at Suffolk, all I'll have to worry about are the stockholders, the Massachusetts commission, the owners, trainers, jockeys, and so on. All I have to do is satisfy the groups at any track. I don't have to worry about other racetrack owners.

"To start with, I intend to improve the physical property at Suffolk. To make the place look better. A more attractive infield. More services. More facilities. Provide better racing, thus attract more fans.

"What bothers me about racing is its emphasis on mutuel handle rather than attendance. I intend to reverse it. And I'm sure going to try and get young people to attend. If the current trend continues, where are the racing fans of 20 years from now?

"I feel strongly that too many people look at the gambling aspect of racing, not the sporting side. I don't care if people bet when they come to Suffolk. That's their business. I never saw any track push people into a betting line. I want the people to come to be entertained. I intend to put on a good show. There are 2,000,000 people in the Boston area to draw from. Who needs more?"

●

The former marine was asked his solution to one of racing's current controversies: Women jockeys.

"I'd run the Lady Godiva Stakes. Eight women riders on eight fillies, and I'd offer a million and a half green stamps to the women in the crowd who picked the winner. You ever see women go for green stamps?

"I know, from having watched some women riders in New Mexico, that they can handle themselves. But every man who has ever seen the women in action at a stocking counter in Macy's basement knows how they can handle themselves. Hell, the Baltimore Colts' defensive line couldn't stop them, and they're the best in professional football."

The one impression Veeck does not want to give at this stage of the race is that he's a Billy-come-lately who has all the answers to the problems racing's been saddled with for many years.

"I don't sail under false colors," he said. "I don't know the technical aspects or racing now. I don't pretend to. How many times do I remember when a man would buy five shares in a baseball team, come out to practice, and overnight tell you that the shortstop couldn't go to his left.

"But I'm confident of racing's future, and I'm confident I'll bring some new approaches to it."

The date is April 19.

Racing will never be quite the same again.

Green Bay Domination Of All-Star Squad Ends

NEW YORK (AP)—Green Bay Packers' domination of the National Football League all-star honors has ended.

Baltimore Colts and Dallas Cowboys each placed four players on the 22-man offensive and defensive units picked for The Associated Press by a 48-man committee of sports writers and sportscasters and announced today.

Earl Morrall, a back-up quarterback for years, finally moved front and centre as an all-star. He replaced John Unitas, the 1967 all-star who gave way to Morrall at Baltimore this year because of a bad elbow.

The starting backfield consisted of Morrall and the fleet running back combination of Leroy Kelly of Cleveland Browns, the two-time rushing champion, and Gale Sayers of Chicago Bears, despite the knee injury that put him out of action for the season Nov. 10.

Clifton McNeil of San Francisco 49ers was named flanker on the basis of his league-leading 71 pass catches.

Bob Hayes of Dallas Cowboys was the split end and John Mackey of Baltimore the tight end.

MAN OFFENSIVE LINE

The five-man offensive line was manned by Mick Tingelhoff of Minnesota at centre, Gene Hickerson of Cleveland and Howie Mudd of San Francisco at guard and Ralph Neely of Dallas and Bob Brown of Philadelphia Eagles at tackle.

Los Angeles Rams had three starters on the defensive team, including end Deacon Jones, tackle Merlin Olsen and safety Eddie Meadow.

Carl Eller of Minnesota was Jones' partner at defensive end and Bob Lilly of Dallas again teamed with Olsen as the defensive tackles.

Dick Butkus of Chicago was picked as the middle linebacker with Chuck Howley of Dallas and Mike Curtis of Baltimore as corner linebackers.

Bobby Boyd of Baltimore and Lem Barney of Detroit Lions won the corner back jobs and Larry Wilson of St. Louis Cardinals was back again at safety.

Ten of the 16 teams placed men on the first team, but for the first time in recent memory, there were no Packers.

WORLD SOCCER RIGHTS BRING $1.6 MILLION

LONDON (Reuters) — Exclusive television rights for the 1970 World Cup soccer finals in Mexico City have been sold to a Mexican millionaire for $1,600,000.

Sir Stanley Rous, president of the International Football Federation, said the rights were sold to Emilio Azcarraga, 37, owner of Telesistema Mexicana, the biggest television company in Latin America.

Selectors Favor Raiders, Chiefs

NEW YORK (AP) — Oakland Raiders and Kansas City Chiefs with 17 players between them, dominate the western team for the American Football League All-Star game.

The team was selected by the coaches, and the remainder of the squad, 11 players, will be picked by the All-Star squad coach, who will be named later this week. The game is scheduled for Jan. 19 in Jacksonville, Fla.

The domination of Kansas City and Oakland is seen most vividly in the defensive alignment in which Kenny Graham of San Diego Chargers is the only player who isn't a Raider or a Chief.

The Kansas City players on defence are end Jerry Mays, tackle Buck Buchanan, linebackers Bobby Bell and Jim Lynch and safety Johnny Robinson. Oakland players are end Ben Davidson, tackle Dan Birdwell, linebacker Dan Conners and cornerbacks George Atkinson and Willie Brown.

The offence is made up of wide receivers Lance Alworth, San Diego, and Warren Wells, Oakland; tackles Jim Tyrer, Kansas City, and Ron Mix, San Diego; guards Ed Budde, Kansas City, and Walt Sweeney, San Diego; centre Jim Otto, Oakland; quarterback John Hadl, San Diego; running backs Paul Robinson, Cincinnati Oakland, kicker Jan Stenerud, Kansas City, and tight end Billy Cannon, Oakland.

Players on the winning team will receive $1,500, the losers $1,000 each.

Flyers Beat Clock On New Year Spree

Nine-Goal Binge Blasts Penguins; Seals Nip Stars

By Canadian Press

Philadelphia Flyers of the National Hockey League celebrated New Year's Eve two weeks early, and with goals instead of noisemakers.

The Flyers trounced Pittsburgh Penguins 8-2 Tuesday night in their biggest scoring splurge since last New Year's Eve when they beat Los Angeles Kings 9-1.

The victory, watched by 6,986, moved Philadelphia into a fourth-place tie with Minnesota North Stars in the Western Division and out of a last-place tie with Pittsburgh.

In the only other NHL game Tuesday, Oakland Seals edged Minnesota 3-2 to move one point behind second-place Los Angeles in the Western Division.

Making the biggest contribution to the Flyers' celebration were Dick Sarrazin, Brit Selby and Andre Lacroix who scored two goals each.

Forbes Kennedy and Leon Rochefort added the other Philadelphia goals. Keith McCreary scored both Pittsburgh goals.

WEAKEST IN SCORING

The triumph was the second in a row for Philadelphia after a streak of 11 winless games. Despite the scoring outburst, the Flyers still have less goals than any other NHL team—58.

Sarrazin, called up from Quebec of the American Hockey League 10 games ago, also picked up two assists.

The 22-year-old native of St. Gabriel de Brandon, Que., has scored five goals and seven assists since his recall. In his rookie season as a professional last season at Quebec, Sarrazin gained only 17 goals and 19 assists in 69 games.

The Penguins and Flyers both had 36 shots on goal. But fine goaltending by Philadelphia's Bernie Parent, who stopped 17 shots in the final period, helped produce the lopsided victory.

Billy Hicke scored two goals to lead Oakland to its victory before 10,730 fans at Minneapolis. Joe Szura scored the other Oakland goal, and Danny Grant and Claude Larose tallied for Minnesota.

Hicke scored the winning goal at 10:04 of the final period when he beat Cesare Maniago with a 20-foot shot after taking a pass from Mike Laughton.

Minnesota outshot Oakland 37-29, but Seals' goaltender Gary Smith had little trouble with most of the North Stars' shots.

Kapp Like Deer ...With Bad Leg

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Minnesota Vikings' quarterback Joe Kapp pulled off one of his quarterback draws for a 15-yard gain in a game this season against Green Bay Packers.

It brought this response from one end of the Metropolitan Stadium press row: "Joe Kapp runs like a deer . . . with a broken leg."

Kapp, who will lead his Vikings against Baltimore Colts Sunday for the National Football League's Western Conference championship, actually takes pride in his running—even if it's slow—and he has a good average to prove it.

"I'm a born runner," he jokes. "I've been running all of my life."

The strapping six-foot-two, 220-pound Kapp has gained 269 yards in 50 carries, a 5.3 average. He scored three touchdowns rushing in the last two weeks as the Vikings beat San Francisco 30-20 and Philadelphia 24-17 for the Central Division championship.

"We tell him to run to the sidelines," Vikings' coach Bud Grant has quipped, "but he still thinks he is in college and tries to run over people."

Kapp led the University of California in rushing one season and played in the 1959 Rose Bowl. He played eight years with Calgary Stampeders and British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League, joining the Vikings in 1967.

He passed for 1,699 yards and 10 touchdowns this year as the Vikings recorded an 8-6 record, including two victories over Green Bay.

The Viking quarterback saw only limited action in Baltimore's 21-9 victory over Minnesota Nov. 24 because of laryngitis.

COLT RUSH STRONG

Kapp gets another chance Sunday in Baltimore's Memorial Stadium.

"Baltimore has a very enthusiastic crowd," said Kapp. "It shouldn't be much of a problem, we don't use that many audibles."

Pension Squabble Headed for Court?

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball's player relations committee said Tuesday it has offered to recommend an increase of $1,000,000 in the clubs' annual contribution to the players' pension plan.

The additional money would bring the total annual contributions to $5,100,000, the committee said, and would provide for participation of the four new clubs.

Improvement in the pension plan has been at the centre of disagreement between players and club owners.

In presenting the proposal, the committee stressed that it has nothing to do with baseball's revenue from national radio and television.

"When the players claim as they do the right to share in national television and radio revenue," a committee statement said, "they are claiming a property right they do not now have or never had."

Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, called the proposal "fraudulent, inadequate and outrageous" and added, "There is a possibility we will go to court."

He added, "It pretends that they have made an offer which will permit a substantial increase in the pension benefits for the players. The offer actually will permit no increase in benefits to the players whatsoever. Major league expansion plus the owners insisting on paying off the unfunded liability of the pension plan at a faster rate than ever before would reach the $5,100,000 total they propose."

FLYING Y CLUB EMPHASIZES . . . . . COACHING AND ADMINISTRATION

Long-Range Program to Build Track Strength

By STEVE HUME

Grass roots reform is the order of the day in track and field, and Victoria YM-YWCA is involved "right up to the ears," says "Y" athletic director Art Burgess.

He says the Flying Y Track Club, resurrected early this year, is part of a three-year, three-pronged program of track development.

"We went out of track and field in 1965 because we couldn't get facilities and we weren't able to supply adequate support to our athletes," Burgess said.

"Since then new priorities have been established."

One of the more important new developments lies in a long-range approach to building competition and athletes, he said.

The Y has beefed up emphasis on development of coaches for young athletes in conjunction with the establishment of an auxiliary organization to back them up with financial and administrative support.

"The plan is no longer to cream the top notch talent off the high school circuit to build track teams," Burgess said.

"We realize now we simply have to build from the ground up—that means establishing a base of coaches and athletes supported by an auxiliary structure.

"People become excited about the performance of an outstanding athlete, and that tends to obscure what is really taking place.

"The fact is that athletes alone don't make track clubs. We wouldn't for a second minimize the contribution of the athletes, but too many people forget that you can't have depth without coaches, and you can't have good competition with an administrative organization," said Burgess.

"Our new philosophy is that we want to turn out coaches and athletes, and not concentrate on a small elite group of stars."

The club now has 60 members, all in the younger age-class groupings, he said, and six coaches have been working with athletes during the off-season.

Athletes are all involved in a cross-country program during the winter, and that includes sprinters, weight-throwers and jumpers as well as distance runners.

The long-distance foundation work is supplemented all winter with indoor workouts for athletes and clinics for coaches.

"What we're trying to do, in terms of coaching and administration, is make track as efficient and as businesslike as possible," Burgess said.

"But we still feel it will take three years to develop a team that will bear weight in provincial circles."

He said the new outlook on track is not limited to the Y club, and pointed out that Victoria's other track clubs are becoming more and more involved with long-range development of younger athletes as a method of providing a base for heavier competition.

They are all providing excellent coaching for youngsters," Burgess said, "and we're not trying to cut in on them at all."

He said the Y club is looking for more athletes, but is also concerned with recruiting more coaches.

"We're willing to take people with no experience who are interested in coaching, give them on-the-job training and incorporate them into our coaching staff," he said.

ARTHUR ASHE URGED BY FATHER . . .

. . . TO SPURN $500,000 OFFER

Man Can Do More With Feet on Ground

ADELAIDE (AP) — If Arthur Ashe listens to his father, he will spurn a $500,000 offer to go on a pro tennis tour and dedicate himself to helping black people find their place in American society.

"You can build your castle too high," Arthur Ashe Sr., father of the world's greatest amteur tennis player, said today.

"It's nice to be rich and famous, but there is more to life than that.

"Our kids in the ghettos need a lot of help. I would like to see Arthur, who can be an inspiration, do his part. I think that is what Arthur wants, too."

The elder Ashe was flown to Adelaide — through funds collected by friends in Richmond, Va. — to watch his son lead the U.S. Davis Cup team against Australia in the challenge round starting the day after Christmas.

Because of Ashe, holder of the U.S. amateur and open titles, the Americans are heavily favored to win the trophy they have been able to take only three times in the last 18 years.

Ashe, who gets out of the army in February, has been the object of spirited bidding by pro groups, with one offer said to amount to $100,000 a year for five years.

To make this purse, however, he would be subject to playing one-night stands on tour in head-to-head competition with other pros.

"This is not what Arthur wants," his father said while watching the American team work out. "A man can do more with his feet on the ground than moving all the time.

"I hope American tennis officials will make a move which will enable Arthur to continue to play tennis, but also devote some time to social work which he wants to do."

Ashe has said he will be playing tennis for money next year. If the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association follows England's lead to permit players to accept prize money without turning pro he is almost certain to turn his back on rich pro offers.

Ashe's father feels the American Negro athlete has the greatest responsibility to reunite the races.

"Muhammad Ali (Cassius Clay) set the racial movement back many years by refusing military service. I thought the black glove act of those two runners in the Olympics (John Carlos and Tommie Smith) was a disgrace."

Harness Mark Eludes Filion

TORONTO (CP) — Herve Filion, 28, world champion harness racing driver from Angers, Que., Tuesday failed in four tries to reach the 400-win milestone for 1968.

Filion's best effort was a third place finish with favored Chief Billjohn in the fifth. He was seventh with Guilty Way in the third, trailed the field with Howy's Champ in the fourth and failed to finish, driving Spring Hill Tommy, in the opening race.

Filion, who needs two wins to reach 400, set a new world record for victories in one season Dec. 10 when he posted three wins at Montreal's Blue Bonnets Raceway. The old mark of 384 was set in 1964 by Eddie Freundt of Dusseldorf, West Germany.

Filion, who has moved to Greenwood for the balance of the winter meet, will try again tonight. He is scheduled to drive Shadow Roll in the fifth and Thunder Royal in the eighth race.

Solid Mc and Clever Larry paired for a $50.80 daily double.

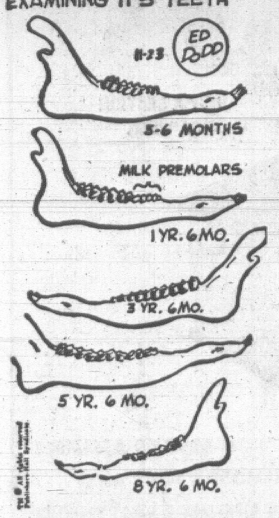
Mark Trail's OUTDOOR TIPS

THERE IS ONLY ONE METHOD OF CORRECTLY DETERMINING THE AGE OF A DEER, AND THAT IS BY EXAMINING ITS TEETH



Old Czech Power To Test New Nats

WINNIPEG (CP) — Czechoslovakia's national hockey team, scheduled to make a six-game exhibition swing through Canada this month, is almost unchanged from the lineup that won a silver medal at the 1968 Winter Olympics.

A roster of the Czech team, issued by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, omits the names of four members of the silver medal squad and lists a few unfamiliar names.

But basically the team is intact and should provide a good indication of what Canada and other countries can expect in the world tournament at Stockholm next March.

Most notable absentee from the team which arrived today for games against Canada's national team is Vladimar Nadrchal, 30, the goalie who has been around since the 1957 championship.

Others who played in the Winter Olympics but have been omitted from the touring Czech team include Pejr Hejma, Jiri Kochta and Jan Klapac.

ADDED TO LINEUP

The unfamiliar names—Mrskvia, Bednar and Eberman—reached CAHA executive director Gordon Juckes in a telegram which asked that they be added to the advance lineup.

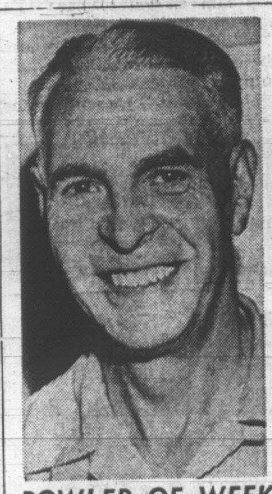
No first names or positions were given for the players and it is assumed they are young players whom the Czech coaches want to observe under fire of international competition.

The Czechs play Canada's nationals in Montreal Dec. 20, Ottawa Dec. 22, Vancouver Dec. 23, Winnipeg Dec. 25 and 27, and Fort William, Ont., Dec. 30.

They return home Dec. 31.

Vladimir Dzurila, 26, a veteran of five national teams, will be in goal while Vaclav Nedomansky, Josef Cerny, Jaroslav Jurik and Josef Golonka also will play.

Besides the Czechs, Sweden, Russia and Japan will play in Canada this year.



BOWLER OF WEEK

Veteran pin-basher Cy Wallis is back as winner of men's fivepin award in annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition for third time. Cy pounded pins for scores of 289 and 287 before finishing with blistering 324 game for division-topping total of 900 in Men's Commercial League at Gibson's Recreations.

Hextall Drops Rope on Spurs

VANCOUVER (CP)—Brian Hextall set up four goals to lead Vancouver Canucks to an easy 6-2 victory over last-place Denver Spurs in a Western Hockey League game before 6,556 fans Tuesday night.

Hextall played a standout game, setting up three goals in the first period. He continually bottled up the Denver club with his close checking.

Bob Barlow led Canucks with two goals while Murray Hall, Ted Taylor, Ted McCaskill and Len Lunde picked up singles.

Gerry Foley and Ed Hoekstra replied for Spurs, who have only six victories this season.

The win moved Vancouver to within one point of second-place Portland Buckaroos and within three points of San Diego Gulls.

Canucks led 3-1 at the end of the opening session and 5-2 by the end of the second.

Rocky Farr, who replaced Jacques Caron in the Denver nets in the second period, kept the score from reaching higher levels when he came up with 23 saves in the final period.

	P	W	L	T	F	A	Pts

Next game: Tonight — Denver at Portland.

Winds Halt Cadboro Bay Dinghy Races

Winds gusting up to 40 miles per hour knocked out dinghy racing in Cadboro Bay Saturday, except for a few hardy skippers of Davidsons who went out to "race" against the Olympic Dragoon star from Vancouver, Steve Tupper.

Winds ranged up to 35 Sunday at Esquimalt Harbor, where Tupper shared a victory with Shirley Dick in the first of two races in the 420 class during Royal Canadian Navy Sailing Association events.

Results:

420 CLASS (13 boats)—First race: 1, Steve Tupper and Shirley Dick; 2, John and Mike Sharpe; 3, Jill Spear and Graham Marrion. Second race: 1, Robin Spear and Pam Crowe; 2, Tupper and Dick; 3, Bruce Duncan and Judy Burbank.

FIREBALLS (7 boats)—First race: 1, Doug Hemphill and Garry Rogers; 2, Roger Oldham and Greg Hemphill; 3, Hardy Lane and Andy Spencer. Second race: 1, D. Hemphill and Rogers; 2, Gordie Davies and Rob Skinner; 3, Lane and Spencer.

OKs (5 boats)—First race: 1, John Ganton; 2, Doug Beer; 3, Frank Cushing. Second race: 1, Beer; 2, Ganton; 3, Ed Cushing.

EL TOROS (5 boats)—First race: 1, Harold Grant; 2, Dean Smith; 3, Mike Blake. Second race: 1, Grant; 2, Smith; 3, Bob Thomas.

EL TORO FALL RESULTS—Admiral's Cup series: 1, Greg Hemphill; 2, Bis Whitby; 3, Harold Grant. Club championship series: 1, B. Whitby; 2, Bob Thomas; 3, Dean Smith.

Strongman Leads By Single Point In Scoring Race

First place in the league scoring race will be at stake Thursday night at Memorial Arena when top teams in the Stuffy McGinnis Hockey League clash at 9:30.

Gord Strongman, setting the point pace with 25 points on 16 goals and nine assists for the front-running Bucks, will be attempting to boost a one-point margin over Buzz Wilson in a game against runner-up Empress Paint.

Wilson has collected 15 goals and nine assists for the paint crew, which is five points off the Buckaroo pace.

In the opening game of Thursday's doubleheader at 8:15, winless Drake Hotel Aces tangle with Automatic Transmission.

Celtic Ace Gets Magazine Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Russell, player-coach of the champion Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association, was named Sportsman of the Year by Sports Illustrated Tuesday.

In its citation, the weekly magazine said: "At a time when the host of superb Negro athletes commands esteem for performance, Russell has proved his ability to lead athletes of both races—and leadership has been an area of sport inaccessible to black men."

Surgery on Knee For Bruin Winger

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins' winger Tommy Williams was reported in good condition today at Baker Memorial Hospital following surgery for torn ligaments of his left knee.

Williams entered the hospital Monday and was operated on Tuesday.

He injured his knee when checked by Chicago's Howie Young in the opening minute of the Bruins' 10-5 National Hockey League victory Saturday night.

Outside Aid Didn't Help Kiniski Foe

With friends like that, who needs enemies? was the pressing philosophical question for heavyweight wrestler John Tolos Tuesday night at Memorial Arena.

Tolos was disqualified in his bid for Gene Kiniski's "world" heavyweight crown following some illegal aid from outside the ropes.

Both combatants had scored one fall when referee Roy McLarty detected another wrestler, Dutch Savage, with a grip on Kiniski's leg. McLarty then awarded the match to Kiniski.

Savage off-set his out-of-the-ring antics with a defeat of Johnn Kostas, while Dean Higuchi downed Tom Anderson and Bobby Shane drew with Vic Roastani.

Baker Cracks Speed Record

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP — Buddy Baker unofficially broke the world closed-course speed record when he circled Daytona International Speedway at 194.380 miles an hour in three-day tire tests.

The unofficial record was 191.938 set July 5 in a turbo-charged Indianspolis-type racing car driven by Jim Hurtubise of North Tonawanda, N.Y.

The official stock car record is 189.222, set by Cale Yarborough of Tommonsville, S.C., while qualifying for last year's Daytona 500 stock car race.

MAGIC NUMBER 5144

If you've got views on the school system the magic number if 5144.

That's the post office box number of the Education Action Committee, made up of a handful of citizens in a variety of occupations who want to help tune the public in on the education scene.

Essentially, they see themselves as a catalyst, spurring community interest in school problems and their potential solutions.

"We have no axe to grind whatsoever," Uvic education professor Dr. Hugh Farquhar said at an information luncheon Tuesday. "What we want to do basically is identify problem areas . . . and try to point the way to solutions."

The group, believed unique in Canada, emphasized it has no ties with any other organization, It will report to the community.

MEMBERS

Other EAC members include George Bevis, Victoria branch manager of Canada Manpower and his deputy Bill Rapanos, psychologist Andrew Mikita, Dr. William Thompson, teachers Mrs. Kory Regan and Ray Wunderlich, broadcaster Fraser McAlpine, city hall administrator Frank Preston, Col. Alfred Hood, and Housewife, Mrs. Barbara Rolls.

Their committee is the outcome of Education 68, a community conference on education held in Victoria last March.

HEAR VIEWS

Mr. Bevis said Tuesday the EAC operation has reached a point where it would like to hear views from the public on the education scene.

People with a viewpoint are invited to write the Education Action Committee at P.O. Box 5144, Postal Station B, Victoria.

Among projects EAC is considering:

A study of the changing role of the school board, a job information exposition where students and businessmen can exchange views, a probe of factors surrounding the school drop out and a seminar involving teachers and personnel managers.

SOROKIN
. . . once refused

MP to Seek Douk Chief's Re-Entry

AGASSIZ, B.C. (CP) — A Liberal MP said Tuesday he intends to wire Stefan Sorokin, spiritual leader of Sons of Freedom Doukhobors, and ask him to apply for a visa to re-enter Canada.

In a telephone interview from Ottawa, Jerry Pringle, member for Fraser Valley East said that Mr. Sorokin, who has lived in Uruguay since 1962, was turned down by Canadian immigration officials when he applied for a visa several months ago.

Doukhobors in this community 60 miles east of Vancouver have kept their children out of school for more than two weeks protesting the refusal.

"Immigration officials have agreed with me that I should wire him and ask him to make application immediately for himself and his son through the Canadian consulate in Uruguay" said Mr. Pringle.

"It is my understanding that the application will be processed within six to seven days after it has been made in Uruguay because it will be cabled to Ottawa," he said.

Village Deserted; Hopelessly Broke

MONTREAL (CP) — Chambly Village, an attempt to preserve the bygone days of New France lay deserted and hopelessly broke Tuesday as the village corporation's board tendered its resignation here and abandoned its provincial charter.

The decision to abandon the charter, acquired in 1961, was taken two years ago but not implemented.

Now, the village, opened near Chambly, 15 miles south of Montreal, in July, 1962, and run by Jacques de Chambly Historical Village, Inc., a non-profit organization, lies deep in snow and debt.

The idea for the village was similar to one that made Upper Canada Village near Morrisburg, Ont., a successful tourist attraction.

Curator Antoine Prevost, 38, said in an interview that many of the village's cottages were broken into a month ago and valuable donated pieces stolen.

Stolen items included a diamond-point armoire, a collection of spinning wheels, beds, a large number of chairs and china pieces, paintings and sketches.

SELECTED WITH CARE

"These people knew what they were doing," said Mr. Prevost. "They took chosen pieces, some quite valuable."

He said there was a caretaker on the premises but "we don't pay him enough to have him stay up all night."

Insurance had lapsed because the corporation could not afford to pay the premiums.

Mr. Prevost holds no hope for recovery of the items "which probably now all are in the United States or Ontario."

A barrier blocks access to the fieldstone houses. It has been there since the summer of 1966, the last season the village welcomed visitors. They totalled between 30,000 and 40,000 in five years.

The 13 buildings are locked and deserted.

Mr. Prevost says the corporation's debt is about $200,000.

The Montreal Trust Company, which has a mortgage on the village, is the main creditor.

POLICE CARRY off Khan-Tineta Horn as more than 150 Indians blocked the Seaway International Bridge at Cornwall, Ont., today. The Indians were protesting against the recent imposition of customs duties on goods purchased in the United States by members of the St. Regis reserve, which straddles the international boundary, and brought into Canada. Miss Horn is from the Caughnawaga reserve near Montreal and a leader in Indian protest movements. (CP Wirephoto)

Toy Prices Bring Plea for Inquiry

OTTAWA (CP) — Wielding the powerful weapon of television advertising, the toy makers are bringing anything but joy to the hearts of parents at Christmastime, (John Burton NDP—Regina East) complained Tuesday night.

He pressed in the Commons for an urgent inquiry by the new consumer affairs department into toy prices, which had sky-rocketed.

Mr. Burton, who Monday sent Prime Minister Trudeau a set of $8.98 plastic building blocks to dramatize his case, said a spot check by him and his wife showed hardly a child's toy below the price range of $15 to $30 each.

He argued that crass commercialization of Christmas has prostituted the traditions of the holiday season and television advertising was adding to the pressures in what amounted to a captive market.

DOUBLE THE COST

He said he has heard that the normal markup on toys is 40 per cent and that they retail at double the manufacturing cost.

Only if the new consumer affairs department responded quickly to such situations would it be an effective instrument to protect the consumer.

Replying for Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford, Dr. Stanley Haidasz, the parliamentary secretary, said a check of the 3,000 complaints sent to the department's Post Office Box 99, Ottawa, showed only 23 were related to toys and only two of these to prices.

He said shoppers should make their selections on price, for all consumer goods, not only toys. Price-shopping would have "the appropriate impact" on the market.

However, if anyone had evidence of illegal restraints in the toy trade, it should be sent to the combines investigators for action.

$200 RING TO ARMY'S KETTLE

The men from HMCS Chaudiere, Esquimalt-based destroyer escort, dropped a cheque for $200 in a Salvation Army Christmas kettle Tuesday.

John Shipwood presented the cheque on behalf of his company to Capt. Hugh Tilley, public relations officer for the army.

Kettles are set up in most downtown stores in Victoria. Money raised will help the Salavation Army continue its work in the community.

Labor, Peterson To Meet Friday

Labor Minister Peterson will meet representatives of the B.C. Federation of Labor in Vancouver Friday to listen to their views on the Mediation Commission Act.

But he made it clear from the outset that the government is not willing to negotiate any part of the new legislation establishing the mediation commission.

Word of the meeting follows a charge from the federation that its official request for a meeting had been turned down despite earlier assurances from Mr. Peterson that he would be willing to talk.

The labir minister said the federation had indicated labor officials wanted to see and discuss the Mediation Commission Act with the government and it was on this basis the request was denied.

He said Tuesday he has since understood that the federation want to meet with him personally rather than the government and so he had arranged the appointment.

BCFL secretary-treasurer Ray Haynes said today "our federation is hopeful that further meetings can be arranged between labor, management and government in order that labor strife can be prevented and the best interests of the public can be served."

Garrison Links CIA To Pair of Killings

NEW YORK (Reuters) — Jim Garrison, New Orleans district attorney, says it is probable that the assassination of President Kennedy, Senator Robert Kennedy and civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. were "accomplished by the same force."

Garrison charged the Central Intelligence Agency with being "deeply involved" in two of the killings.

The district attorney told the magazine Evergreen Review that there is sufficient data to state "as a probability" that the "same force" accomplished the three murders.

Garrison says in an interview that in President Kennedy's case "we have a great deal of data available."

"In the second case (of Martin Luther King) there's quite a bit of data now available—in the third (Robert Kennedy), there is just a little data available."

"However, there is enough data available in all three cases to state, as a probability, that they were all accomplished by the same force and that they were all intelligence assassinations."

He said this does not mean that "the command came down from the top."

"But it does mean that at least a major component of the Central Intelligence Agency now is in the business of exterminating any national leaders who are opposed to the perpetuation of the cold war, as well as to our adventures in Asia."

'And I think it will continue."

Evergreen Review is a monthly publication devoted mainly to politics, literature and the arts.

Mayor First In, Last Out

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Mayor Orville Hubbard installed a time clock outside his office several weeks ago. Then he started punching in and punching out.

Soon others were using the clock until now more than 20 of Hubbard's aides punch in and punch out each day. And three of the punchers make more than $20,000 a year.

Hubbard said he thought the idea might work to his office's advantage in administering the Detroit suburb of 115,000.

"I didn't ask them what they thought about it," Hubbard said in an interview.

Most of the entries on his card show the mayor arriving before 8 a.m. and leaving generally around 10 p.m.

The average department head works from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Rape Conviction

PRINCE GEORGE (CP)—Two youths Monday were convicted by a British Columbia Supreme Court jury in the rape of a 33-year-old woman, after they broke into her home and stole about $50 last Aug. 17. Gaylord Joseph, 18, and Marvin Gene Cavannaugh, 19, both of Prince George, will be sentenced Friday.

Defence Chief's Comment Hit

By PETER BRAESTRUP

SAIGON (WP) — Senior U.S. military and diplomatic officials privately deplored Defence Secretary Clark Clifford's declaration Sunday that a Communist "fourth wave" offensive against Saigon would not affect the Paris peace talks.

"Whether they mount an offensive or don't, it will not affect the Paris peace talks," Clifford said in Washington Sunday.

Such a "winter-spring" offensive has been widely expected here for some days. In the opinion of both U.S. and South Vietnamese officials, Clifford's comment came close to an open invitation to Hanoi to go ahead and attack—meaning higher casualties for both sides.

Official U.S. spokesmen refused comment on this and other Clifford statements Sunday. But his latest words and the often bitter private U.S. reaction here once more underscored the growing gap between the outgoing Johnson administration and the men it committed to help prevent a Communist takeover in South Vietnam.

There is widespread feeling among U.S. officials here—and, predictably, among South Vietnamese leaders—that the White House is prepared to make major concessions and overlook anything but all-out invasion to get a U.S. troop withdrawal started before it leaves office Jan. 20.

Cabbie Gets Passenger Out of Hole

MONTREAL (CP) — Cabbie Elphege Letourneau picked up a fare the hard way Monday night.

Called to a north-end apartment building, the taxi driver watched in amazement as his passenger dashed down the front walk, leaped over a snowbank in front of the cab —and vanished.

There was no sign of the man at first glance when Mr. Letourneau got out to investigate. Then the "hole" truth became clear.

Clutching the edges of an open manhole were two cold hands, and somewhere in the depths below was the rest of his passenger.

Summoning all his strength, the cabbie pulled his load to the surface—none the worse aside from a few bruises and a noticeable loss of cool.

Flu Vaccine To Be Piled

OTTAWA (CP)—Health Minister John Munro said Tuesday the government hopes to have a stockpile of vaccine to combat Hong Kong flu, by the middle of January, but he indicated there might not be enough to go around in Canada.

He suggested the food and drug directorate would have to decide priorities for distribution, with elderly people probably first in line.

Easier U.K. Divorce Closer to Reality

LONDON (AP) — A bill to make divorces easier in Britain was given second reading in the House of Commons Tuesday after sharp debate.

The vote was 183 to 106, a majority of 77.

The approval—agreement in principle—means the bill will go to the committee stage and has a good chance of becoming law.

The bill would broaden the grounds for divorce to include mutual consent of both partners or of just one after a five-year separation. At present the only grounds are adultery, cruelty, desertion and insanity.

Labor member Leo Abse, a prime supporter of the reform, told the House there were at least 250,000 married people, "reluctantly married and permanently living together," without hope of obtaining a divorce on the present grounds.

Their hopes of ending their marriages had been dashed on the three previous occasions that divorce reform had died at the second reading stage, he said.

Opponents of the bill charged that it was unfair to women but the only woman member to speak in today's debate, Dame Joan Vickers, a Conservative, supported it.

Davis Backs Support Plan For Fisheries

OTTAWA (CP) — The Newfoundland fisheries industry, already said to have two strikes against it, won a promise from Fisheries Minister Jack Davis Tuesday that he will go to bat for it at cabinet.

The minister told a provincial delegation headed by Newfoundland Fisheries Minister Aidan Maloney that the final decisions, however, are up to his cabinet colleagues.

He did promise to recommend a support program for the fiscal year which begins April 1, 1969. Mr. Maloney told a news conference after day-long talks he was hopeful the industry "will get the same level of federal support" it received in 1968.

The industry received some $4,500,000 of an $8,500,000 crash program of federal deficiency payments to the Atlantic fisheries this year.

The first strike against Newfoundland fishermen—and the East Coast industry generally—came with an end to the program Oct. 31.

The second blow was a drop in U.S. prices paid the industry for its products coupled with stiffening competition from other fishing nations aiming at the American market.

DISCUSSED REPORT

Tuesdays' meeting discussed a report by a team of consultants commissioned by the federal government a year ago to examine the Newfoundland fishing industry, and a brief from the industry.

Mr. Davis said he and his department officials want to learn all they can about the problems besetting the fishery before making recommendations. Although it was too early to announce solutions at this time "there is a need to continue a program of support." This he would recommend to cabinet.

Mr. Maloney said federal support will have to "at least match the deficiency payments of 1968." He had come here "hopefully to get some solutions to problems facing the industry.

Mr. Davis said one reason for delays in arriving at solutions is that the total impact on "trade and commerce" with the U.S. must be considered and "this all takes time."

The U.S. is by far the biggest market for Canadian fish and any new support policy here must be weighed against a possible backlash policy south of the border to protect U.S. fishermen.

DETAILS NOT KNOWN

Mr. Davis said he believes the Newfoundland industry must know the federal government's intentions early in 1969 because of the East Coast trawler operation. But for now:

"I can't tell you how many dollars or the shape of them."

The meeting here was held in a crisis atmosphere with reports that several Newfoundland fish-processing plants will close if help is not forthcoming.

The British Unilever Corp., which operates a plant at Harbour Grace, Nfld., already has announced that it will shut down at the end of January. This will leave 800 plant workers jobless and 1,200 fishermen without a market. The effects on the community will be disastrous, Newfoundland MPs say.

Peace, Not Shaky Truces Urged in Pope's Appeal

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul appealed to the world's leaders today for peace and said it could not be guaranteed by a precarious truce or an unstable balance of power.

"Without peace there can be no confidence and without confidence no progress," the Pope said.

"Peace is the duty of those responsible for the fate of peoples, a duty of every citizen of the world."

The Pope's message was issued in connection with the World Day of Peace he has proclaimed Jan. 1.

The pontiff appealed to the world to unite in celebrating this peace day so that "the first sun of the new year must shed upon the earth the light of peace."

He added this appeal to youth:

"We dare to hope that, above all, it will be youth who will grasp this invitation as a demand which can interpret everything new, lively and great, yearned for by their exasperated spirits, because peace demands the correction of abuses and coincides with the cause of justice."

"The necessity of war," Pope Paul said, "could be justified only in exceptional and deplorable conditions of fact and law which should never be certified in modern world society.

"Reason, and not might, must decide the destinies of peoples. Understanding, negotiations, arbitration, and not outrage, blood and slavery, must intervene in the difficult relations between men.

"No precarious truce, unstable equilibrium, fear of reprisals and revenge, successful conquest or fortunate arrogance, can guarantee a peace worthy of that name."

City Details Convention Centre Plans

Ald. Hugh Ramsay was chairman of his last convention centre committee meeting Tuesday still solidly convinced the proposed CPR-City development is the best Victoria will see.

The committee met to receive a full report from negotiating team head Dennis Young, city manager.

Mr. Young stressed that his report was merely to bring the committee up to date on negotiations and was not to be construed as the final agreement between the city and the CPR.

CHANGES

"There have been several worthwhile changes since the first heads of agreement were drawn up," Mr. Young said. "This is to acquaint you with those changes. But this present draft by no means constitutes a commitment by the city of any kind."

The major changes have already been reported in the Times.

Should the agreement be adopted by council and approved in referendum form by the public they would see:

- The city obtain 2.3 acres of land from the CPR for $1.
- Construction of a community-convention centre building and a large parking facility for $2.3 million.
- Agreement from the CPR to buy back the land and purchase the convention centre should the Empress Hotel cease to operate during the next 20 years.
- Agreement from the CPR to purchase outright the convention-community centre should the city decide, after 20 years of operation, to get out of the community centre business.
- Redesign and interior reconstruction of the Humboldt Street wing of the Empress and maintenance of the wing and the total expense of the CPR.
- A full kitchen to serve the centre at CPR expense.
- And an agreement that the CPR would pickup 25 per cent of any operating losses.

MONEY FORMULA

The committee was told that a financial formula was still being worked out for presentation to the people in the late spring of 1969.

Mr. Young reminded the committee that whatever the decision of the people on the centre, the city would still be faced with construction of a large car parking facility in the immediate future.

"It should be borne in mind that we have to build a parking facility in that area of the city whether or not we go ahead with this proposal," he said. "I think we sould always relate the cost of that facility to the cost of the convention-community centre.

"We keep talking about the cost of the centre as being $2.2 million. Included in that total is $550,000 for the parking facility — which we must build. In other words, when we talk about the centre we should relate the cost to an expenditure of $1.65 million."

GOOD FOR CITY

Ald. Ramsay and Mayor Hugh Stephen both said that they were convinced that the CPR-city proposal would be good for the city.

"I'm still convinced that it is a good proposal," said Ald. Ramsay. "It should be supported by the community — and I think it will be when the complete package is put together."

Mayor Stephen said Victoria would never have a more beneficial scheme offered to it.

"It has been claimed by critics that CPR will benefit if this proposal goes through," he said. "Of course it will benefit, but so will the city.

"Surely an agreement which benefits both parties is a good agreement."

DETAIL PLANS

Ald. Ramsay said that while negotiations would continue, the next major step in the proposal would come in late January when detailed plans of the proposal would be made available.

"After that will come more study, the working out of the best financing formula, then a two or three-month wait while that is digested and then the presentation of the entire package to the people."

He stressed that no contract could be signed with the CPR until a vote is taken.

SECOND SET OF QUADS

IMPERIA, Italy (AP) — A 28-year-old woman whose first set of quadruplets died at birth a year ago gave birth to four more babies Tuesday. One died.

The other three were reported in good condition by doctors at the Villa Rosana Clinic. The mother, Maria Columbu Gariano, wife of a policeman, was reported well.

Two boys and two girls were born. One of the girls died. The surviving three weighed 4.1, 3.4 and 3.3 pounds.

ANDERSON
... balance needed

'West Paying Steep Price'

MONTREAL (CP) — David Anderson, Liberal member of Parliament for the British Columbia riding of Esquimalt-Saanich, said Tuesday there is widely-held opinion in Western Canada that it is the one area of the country that can afford "to go it alone."

Anderson told a Montreal service club he does not see any "militant separatist philosophy or movement developing" which might parallel separatist political movements in Quebec.

"But what I do see developing is an attitude or frame of mind among reasonable and rational people that the price the West pays for Confederation is steep indeed," he said.

People in Western Canada were convinced of the truth of B.C. Premier W. A. C. Bennett's statement "that the federal government takes $3 of taxes from British Columbia for every dollar spent in the province."

Anderson said he is not convinced, but whether it was right or wrong, it is "commonly believed that we in the West pay much more than we get in return."

"This attitude has led to the widely-noted opinion, again among perfectly reasonable people, that Western Canada is the one area of the country which can best afford, economically, to go it alone. Indeed, it is often said that this would be very much to our advantage."

It had led to an attitude towards Eastern Canada, Quebec and Ontario in particular, which was less than conciliatory.

"What is needed is a balance ... between government development expenditures on more favored and less favored areas.

"I have suggested that the federal government's enthusiasm for regional development of backward areas had led it to ignore the equally important development of better-endowed 'growth' areas and I believe that the time has come to review this policy."

BAD WEATHER FOILS ANTARCTIC RESCUE

LONDON (AP)—Efforts to rescue five British explorers marooned in the icy wastes of the Antarctic were stalled by bad weather Tuesday night.

The Royal Navy's ice patrol ship Endurance radioed word that bad weather kept its two helicopters from getting aviation fuel to the stranded men.

The five explorers in the British Antarctic survey team were aboard a twin-engined plane forced down on Antarctica's Graham Land a week ago. No one was hurt, reports reaching London said, but fuel was needed to get the plane in the air again.

Private World of Queen to Be Shown to Public As Build-Up for Charles' Coming Investiture

Princess Anne, wearing an upswept hairdo and a brown velvet cloak, and her brother, Prince Charles, accompanied their parents, Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip, when they attended the recent royal premiere of the movie, "Chitty Chitty Bang Bang." (AP Wirephoto by cable from London.)

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — The private world of the Queen at work and leisure will be made public for the first time on television screens in 1969, a year that will see the biggest royal event since the 1953 Coronation.

The TV program, made jointly by the BBC and Britain's commercial network, will take viewers inside the machinery of monarchy as part of the buildup to the July 1 investiture of Prince Charles as Prince of Wales. It will be shown in Britain a week before the ceremony and may be seen later in North America.

Except for a state visit to Austria by the Queen next May, no major royal engagements are scheduled for 1969. Everything is focused on the pageantry in Wales, which is expected to reap a rich harvest of tourist business on the side.

Preparations for the investiture—a kind of mini-coronation, though much rarer than real coronations in Britain's history—made up a good deal of royal news in 1968, which otherwise was sadly marked by the death of the popular Princess Marina, mother of Princess Alexandra and the Duke of Kent.

Marina was 61 when she died Aug. 27 of a brain tumor. Her illness had been unknown to the British public and she had appeared a few weeks earlier at her favorite event of the year, the Wimbledon tennis championships.

DASH OF DRAMA

A dash of drama was added to the investiture preparations by the threatening voices of some militant Welsh nationalists. Their activities next July still pose a serious question for security officials.

Prince Charles spent much of 1968 preparing for the increased public responsibilities his coming-of-age will bring.

In a new kind of royal tour, he studied the workings of government departments, went underground to meet miners and subway workers and paid his first visit to Wales, which he will tour extensively after the ceremony at 12th century Caernarvon Castle.

The Queen carried out one of her most successful foreign tours in 1968, encountering enthusiastic Latin American crowds wherever she and Prince Philip went on their 18-day, 18,000-mile November journey through Chile and Brazil. Prince Philip joined the Queen after attending the opening of the Mexico Olympics.

One British correspondent went so far as to say: "My own feeling is that the Queen is probably more popular in Chile than in England, though it may be heresy to say so."

Richard Gott continued his summing-up in The Guardian by suggesting the British authorities should take swift advantage of this royal softening-up of export territory, perhaps taking a leaf out of Canada's book. He noted that the week before the Queen arrived in Santiago, Chile, the biggest Canadian trade mission ever assembled landed to begin a tour of nine Latin American countries.

Princess Anne left school in 1968, doing less well than her elder brother in matriculation exams. No plans have yet been announced for her future, but she has just completed a six-week French course, putting in gruelling 10-hour days to bring her school French up to conversational fluency.

Young Prince Andrew, eight, started preparatory school and Prince Edward, four, youngest of the royal children, began lessons with a governess.

The Queen Mother's only trip abroad in 1968 was to Denmark to attend the wedding of Princess Benedikte. Her engagements at home included presiding with Princess Margaret at a palace reception in June for 50 Canadian veterans who commanded British army units in the 1944 invasion of Europe.

Princess Margaret had no major engagements in the year, and Princess Alexandra's principal royal task was opening British Week in Stockholm at the end of September. She had been scheduled to represent the Queen at the independence of Mauritius and Madagascar, cancelled because of local unrest.

Children Savor Christmas Magic

By ELIZABETH BENNETT

When Felicity Jones made her Christmas cakes this year she doubled her recipe. She had a plan that would put the reformed Scrooge to shame.

Felicity and her husband Jack, who live in Victoria under quite different names, want to make this Christmas a little special for their two children, a six-year-old I will call Megan and four-year-old Arthur.

"We've always let them know that there are other children less fortunate than they," says Felicity," but this year we decided to let them see that we are willing to do something about it."

The something they are doing is preparing a hamper for a family on welfare. An organization known as the Christmas Bureau gave the Jones' the name of a mother with twin five-year-old boys.

"I'm going to include a small turkey, Christmas pudding, my own Christmas cake and cookies as well as toys for the little boys. I'd like to give a small gift to the mother as well, but what can you give a woman you don't know anything about?"

Already Felicity has given her a gift that can't be beat in any mother's books, and has helped another organization while doing it. "We sent money to the Mod Squad for the Red Feather appeal. They will contact the mother through the Bureau and find out what services she needs most that they can provide."

Up to now Megan and Arthur have played only a small role in the preparations; they helped with the baking but experience warned Felicity against taking them shopping for the toys.

Their part will come when it is time for the hamper to be wrapped. Then they will accompany their parents to meet "their family" and deliver the goodies.

Felicity and Jack want to meet "their family", which is lucky. The Christmas Bureau doesn't have the facilities to deliver.

In 1967 they handled donations to over 1,500 families. The job of matching donors to recipients, and making sure that the recipient is home when the hamper is delivered is work enough for an organization that has only one paid worker and depends on volunteers for the rest.

Time is another problem for the bureau. Felicity decided in October that she wanted to take part in the scheme but it wasn't until late November that the bureau could assign her a family. The deadline for prospective donors was early in December.

By next year the bureau hopes to get things rolling at an earlier date, but it is hampered by the organizations it works with who often wait until the last moment to make their plans.

As Felicity talks of her plans for the hamper, Megan and Arthur enact a tragedy in which an orange box boat burns and sinks. They don't seem to miss the toys they sacrificed to another Christmas project a few weeks ago.

"I suggested that since we would be moving in a few months and they would have to give up many of their toys then anyway, that it might be nice to go through the toy-box and decide which toys could be repaired and given to less fortunate youngsters."

While the six-year-old proved relatively possessive about her toys, perhaps because she is older, the four-year-old found that most of his toys were quite expendable for a good cause.

"Which," says Felicity," is one way to get to know your children."

CLUBWOMEN'S NEWS

Day of Recollection —Twenty-five members from the Greater Victoria Catholic Women's League gathered recently at St. Mary's Priory, Colwood, to hold a day of recollection. The suggestion for such a meeting was made by Mrs. H. James, church life convener of the Victoria Diocesan Council. Several other gatherings were planned from Duncan, Nanaimo, Courtney and Alberni. Capt. Raymond Delisle, OSM, military chaplain, Belmont Park, arranged the program around the theme "Preparation for Christ's Coming." During the morning he spoke on this topic. At noon the group celebrated the Eucharist. This was followed by a luncheon. The feast of St. Nicholas was commemorated at the beginning of mass. During the afternoon session Rev. Delisle spoke on "What Joy Comes after Affliction." A discussion came to the conclusion that the greatest affliction for the "people of God" today is the apparent absence of God in the world. Rev. Delisle suggested the members manifest God by radiating joy. Following the benediction and the singing of "O Come O Come Emmanuel" Mother M. Ferdinand served tea.

Thank-You Notes Can Be Fun Letters

By PENNY SAVER

It was last Monday morning the mail truck came to call. It drove right up the driveway, oblivious of the large patch of mud that had decided to make its home in the very centre of the track. The driver hopped out nimbly and hefted a large box, clearly loaded with gifts, into the hall. Another followed and yet another. It was like a miracle—all the relatives had mailed in unison. I signed for the parcels and wishing the driver a "Merry Christmas" closed the door and fell to examining the loot. A few minutes later I became aware that the roar of the truck's motor was not diminishing. Sure enough, the mail truck was hub-deep in our mud-hole and the harder the driver tried to break free, the deeper the wheels sank. Red-faced and apologetic I rushed out to help and a few boards and several shovels-full of sand later the wheels found the traction they needed and the truck was free. Another cheery "Merry Christmas" and I was free to inspect my bundles again.

The mud-hole is undoubtedly caused by a broken water-pipe, and sometime in the new year we will have to call someone up to fix it. I can't get anyone to take over writing my thank-you letters for all those gifts, however, so I decided to take a day to see what is inspiring in letter paper.

Would you believe round sheets? These are almost guaranteed to convince teenagers that letter-writing isn't "square." For $2.50 there are 24 sheets with 18 matching envelopes. The Man In The Next Office to Doyle Klyn would be pleased with that. The sets are available in yellow, green, pink or blue. On the back of each writing sheet there is a design, mostly floral in derivation.

Sock It to Them

Water-proof teens may want to exhort their friends to "Sock it to me." For $2 there are sets including 40 letter sheets, 20 envelopes and 24 self-sticking paisley-shaped seals bearing the immortal phrase "Sock it to me." The sheets, approximately five inches by eight inches, come in orange, yellow, pink or blue. The seals are all pink and orange. The envelopes match the paper.

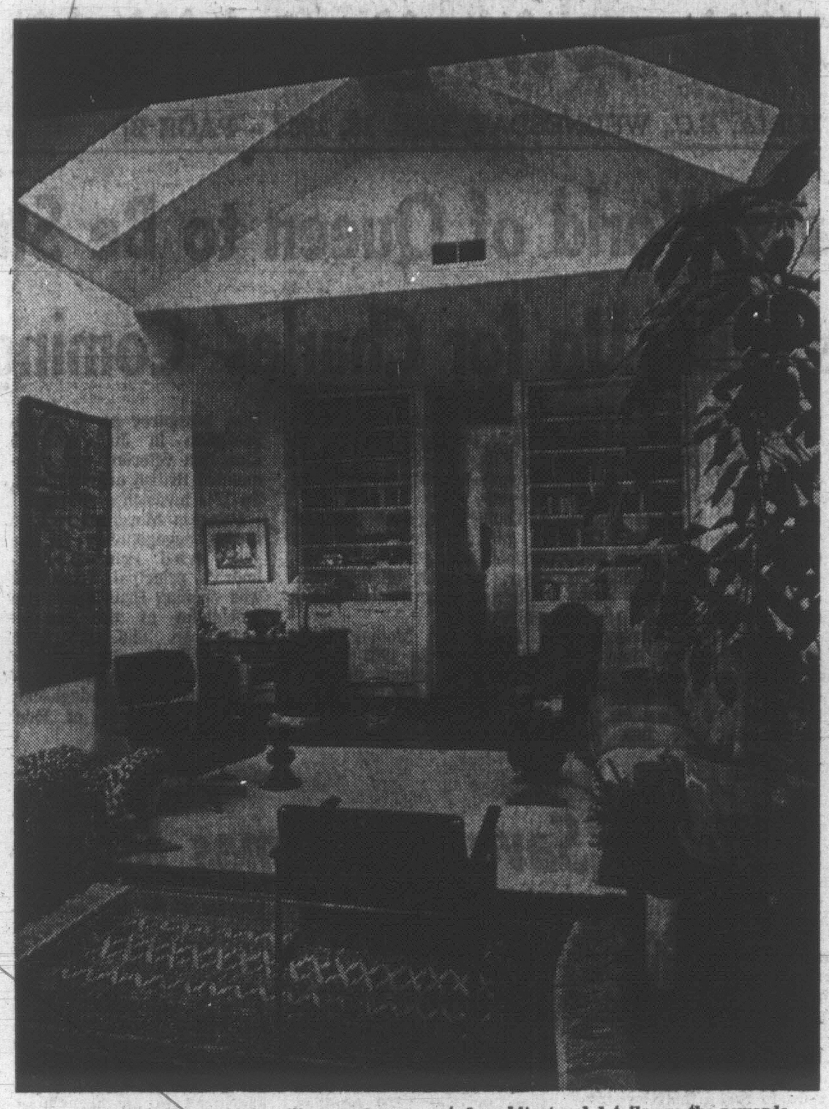
Many of us travel during the holiday season and those long hours spent sitting on a boat, bus or train could be put to use if we only had paper on which to write "thank-you's." This is what lap-packs are about. A lap-pack consists of a cardboard folder containing 20 note-sized sheets and 10 envelopes. The folder both keeps the notes neat and gives you something firm to write on. These note sets are $1.50. Each folder is printed on the outside with a pattern. One has poodles, another butterflies. Yet another showed a profusion of flowers. These patterns are repeated in the upper left corner of the note-sheets. The envelopes are white on the outside, but tinted inside. The colors are all pastel.

If pastels aren't your bag, there is another set for $1.75. This has slightly larger note sheets that are absolutely plain and white. The folder itself is black with a needle-point design printed on the cover. This needle-point design is echoed in the envelopes which are plain white outside and printed with a needle-point pattern inside.

If you would like to know where to shop for these items, please call 382-3131.

CLUBWOMEN'S NEWS

Celebrate Birthday — Colfax Rebekah Lodge No. 1 celebrated its 81st anniversary when members met recently. Refreshments were served from gaily decorated tables. Mrs. Florence Robbins, the oldest member present, cut the cake. Mrs. Viola Sharrocks sang "Happy Birthday," accompanied by Mrs. Ruby Larkee on the piano. Mrs. Myrtle Silver was presented with her past district deputy president jewel. Mrs. Margaret Bird received her 15-year veteran jewel and Mrs. Mary Burgess, a Regina member who is wintering in Victoria, received her 40-year membership pin. District deputy president Mrs. Dorothy Brandon presented the lodge with a white Bible for the altar. A draw was made for a lamp and doll.



Lovely wood floors, high ceilings and unexpected architectural details are the rewards one reaps from old houses, welcome features that can be retained even though some remodelling must be done. (Joshua Freiwald photo.)

Old Houses Need New Tricks

There's no denying the charm of an older house if it has been maintained and cared for during its life. But even when the care has been casual, renovation can make it look like new and it will have the thick walls and high ceilings seldom attained in homes built today.

Shown here is a duplex that is old, but with a warm, contemporary look that belies its age. There are times when it takes more than just a paint job, when structural changes become a "must," and this house was just such an instance. To lighten the narrow, dark room, new spotlights now travel across one end of the ceiling and down the hall. But skylights made the major effort in this direction, installed on both sides of the high sloping ceiling. Enlarging the too-small windows did not provide the answer, because they open onto adjacent, and close, buildings. The skylight, however, brightens the whole room without the outlook problem.

Another situation to be corrected was the narrowness of the room, accomplished by emphasizing horizontal lines with the shelves on each side of the doorway, and by putting the desk in the windowed alcove, so that it juts into the room. The rugs help, too, three different kinds used, and placed so that they run the width of the room, with wide expanses of floor between them.

Holiday Projects At Hospital

The Women's Auxiliary to the Royal Jubilee Hospital has planned a series of projects for the holiday season.

An engraved silver spoon will be presented to each baby in the maternity section of the hospital on Christmas Day. Another spoon will be placed in reserve for the first baby born at the hospital in the New Year.

In keeping with a tradition of many years, a group of the members will meet in the Richmond Pavilion on Friday morning, where they will trim trees. Later, they will distribute the trees to all the wards and public buildings at the hospital.

They are looking forward in particular to placing the trees in the second and third floor sunrooms where new furniture, bought by the auxiliary, is now in use.

On Nativity Day, patients and nurses in residence will receive the auxiliary's gifts of Christmas items. These will be placed on dinner trays.

Mrs. W. Thorpe is heading the program of events. Helping her are Mrs. W. McConnell, Mrs. K. Downey, Mrs. I. Edwards, Mrs. I Rigley, Mrs. J. Hough, Mrs. F. Smith, Mrs. A. Stewart, Mrs. J. Hobbs, Mrs. I. Estridge, Mrs. V. Price, Mrs. J. Keane, Mrs. G. Coffey and Miss Edna Wallace.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Whose Show Is This, Anyway?

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The other day you gave some advice to a man who wanted to watch the birth of his baby but whose wife was opposed to the idea.

You stated that "since it was his wife's body and her performance, it should be her decision."

Listen, if it weren't for his permformance, there wouldn't be any baby. So I don't think she has the right to keep him out.

K.E.G.: UNITED STATES ARMY

DEAR ABBY: I am a physician (no name, please) who has delivered nearly a thousand babies and I have my own theory about women who want their husbands in the delivery room when they have their babies.

A woman who truly loves her husband will do everything in her power to spare him unpleasantness. But the vindictive woman, who takes pleasure in punishing her husband, will insist that he is right there when she has her baby.

I know, because when a patient asks my permission to have her husband in the delivery room and I invite the husband to do so, most of them say, "Doctor, do I have to?"

KANSAS CITY M. D.

DEAR ABBY: Let's face it, the woman who wants her husband to watch her have a baby, is a martyr.

Ask any doctor how many men want their wives in the operating room when they have surgery.

REGISTERED NURSE

DEAR ABBY: Re. the husband who wanted to watch the birth of his child: I have two little girls, and with the first one I had to physically overpower three people who tried to keep me out of the delivery room when I heard my wife screaming my name. She had a hard time to say the least.

With our second, the doctor invited me to watch. My wife had a much easier time knowing I was there. Believe me, I am not sorry I watched. It gave me a deeper sense of appreciation for my wife, and made me love her more than ever.

"GOT TO WATCH"

DEAR ABBY: I agree that if a wife does not want her husband to watch the delivery of their child, he should stay away.

I am the father of four, and I am also an obstetrician and gynecologist, and I was not present at the delivery of any of my children. My wife specifically stated that she did not want me there, which pleased me as I had no desire to be there.

May I add, my two grandchildren were also delivered by another obstetrician, which was just fine with me.

MINNEAPOLIS M.D.

DEAR ABBY: I differ with you on whether or not the husband should be permitted to watch the birth of his own child. If more fathers witnessed childbirth, they would have more respect for their wives. I solicit your rebuttal.

FATHER OF THREE

DEAR FATHER: If the husband wants to watch, and his wife has no objections, and it's all right with the doctor, it's all right with me. But if the wife says, "Stay out"—and in this case she did—that should settle it.

DEAR ABBY: The answer you gave the man who wanted to watch the birth of his baby didn't sound like you. First of all, the wife's body belongs to her husband as she gave herself to him when they got married. As for her "performance," if that's what she is staging, she should sell tickets.

I don't think it should be her decision exclusively. It is also his child.

TODAY'S RECIPE

CARROT SOUP

One can (16 oz.) diced carrots, 1 cup water, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 can condensed cream of celery soup, 1 cup milk, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ¼ teaspoon nutmeg, 1 teaspoon parisey flakes.

Combine carrots with their liquid, water and salt in an electric blender and whirl until smooth, or force carrots through a sieve and combine with water and salt.

Put in a saucepan and stir in soup, milk, pepper, nutmeg and parsley.

Heat until bubbly. Makes six to eight servings.

FEATHERED FRIPPERY

An English model peeps through cascading osprey feathers as she shows a hat, one of those belonging to the Millinery Guild's spring collection, held recently at the Dorchester Hotel in London, Eng. In pale lime green, the hat, designed by Wilfred Pattison, consists of an organza pillbox with the feathers falling from the crown. It is worn with a matching cape. The hat costs about $190 and the entire outfit sells for $600. (AP Wirephoto by cable from London)

Tip From Designer

By EUNICE FARMER

Create Up-to-Date Styles From Out-of-Date Clothes

Dear Readers,

I am constantly on the lookout for ways you can use to renovate your old clothes so you can get another season's wear from them and still have a new look.

I came across a very nifty tip I am sure some of you will be happy about. If you have a tweed or plaid suit that has seen its day, and you're plain tired of it, remove the sleeves and face them as you would a sleeveless dress. Then make a new dress in a constrasting color with the new high collar (which can be modified to look well on everyone) and the new long, narrow sleeves. The dress could be belted, if your waistline permits, or just be the A-line shift dress we have been wearing.

There was a time when this look would have been "out," because it would have looked like an extra jacket you were trying to get some good from, but now, with the art of B.H. Wragge, a top designer who has used this idea, it will look very nifty.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Remember Personal Care

Don't forget yourself in the rush! The woman in the home is usually the one who selects the Christmas gifts for friends and relatives. She gets the decorations for the house and is responsible for the festive board. Many women are also preparing rooms for the arrival of college children or other members of the family, or house guests.

Lowman

This is a happy but hectic time for her. Unless she makes a point of avoiding it, she may well arrive at Christmas Eve too tired to really enjoy the fun with the rest of the family. She may also look tired and be poorly groomed.

Don't wait too long to make an appointment for your hair and nails. If you take care of them yourself, set aside a definite time for this. Do not make it the last minute, and do not allow anything to interefer with it.

Take time to look over your clothes. Does something need cleaning or pressing? Is there a button off one of your favorite costumes? Are your gloves in order? Do you need an accessory or so to complete an outfit you may wish to wear?

Unless you include time for such items as these in your plans, you are sure to meet some important occasion not looking or feeling your best.

When all of the Christmas preparations are added to our usual responsibilities, we may neglect skin care, not realizing what a difference even a few days' neglect can make. Don't forget your usual cleansing and skin lubrication in the hurry.

Proper makeup can make a big difference in the way you look. For Mrs. Lowman's free leaflet. "What's Going On?" send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Firm Guidelines Urged for Plan For Oak Bay

A firm political decision should be made on what parts of the official plan for development of Oak Bay are to be followed by council, Ald. Scott Wallace said Monday night.

The plan, produced for the municipality by the Capital Region Planning Board in 1967, is not always adhered to strictly, he said.

There should be some form of guideline recommending which parts of it are to be followed and which parts are not, he said.

"We seem to use the plan when we don't like something but ignore it when there is something we like which is not included in the plan."

He asked that the advisory planning committee "set some stipulations" to guide council in zoning decisions.

Mayor Fred Hawes said council uses it as an advisory document only and wants to be free from restrictions on decisions on each application separately.

Woodward Foundation Benefits

VANCOUVER (CP) — Merchant - philanthropist Percival Archibald Woodward left an estate of $4,566,466, according to a will filed for probate at the Vancouver Court House Tuesday.

Mr. Woodward, who helped his brother, the late Lieutenant-Governor W. C. Woodward, develop a family store into a retail empire, died here in August at 79.

The family home and income from a $1,500,000 trust fund will provide for his wife, Marion Louise Woodward.

The residue of the estate and the income will go to the Woodward Foundation, through which he gave more than $5,000,000 to various causes in the province since 1955.

His largest gift, and the largest single contribution ever received by the University of British Columbia was the $3,500,000 he provided in 1964 to construct a health science centre.

In 1919, Mr. Woodward introduced the first self-serve grocery in B.C., a forerunner of today's supermarket.

In 1947 he created Woodward Stores Ltd., which oversees operation of 14 department stores in B.C. and Alberta.

Marxists Close Second In Guyana

GEORGETOWN (Reuters) — Prime Minister Forbes Burnham appeared today to be certain of victory over Marxist Cheddi Jagan but without a comfortable working majority in the National Assembly.

With returns from seven districts still outstanding in Guyana's first general election since it gained independence from Britain in 1966, Burnham's People's National Congress led with 114,113 votes. Jagan's People's Progressive party had 108,103.

The final result, expected this afternoon, will depend on the voting in crucial and controversial overseas ballots.

Burnham, who now has fought four elections with Jagan since 1957, said again Tuesday he would not form a coalition government again as he did in 1964.

He said that if he failed to win a clear majority in the National Assembly he would consent to head a caretaker government only until new elections.

Russia Fulfils Czech Withdrawal Pledge

From AP—Reuters

PRAGUE (CP) — Military experts say the Kremlin apparently has fulfilled its pledge to get the majority of the troops that invaded Czechoslovakia out of the country by today.

The Soviet-Czechoslovak treaty legalizing the occupation was ratified by the National Assembly Oct. 18. Premier Oldrich Cernik said then that the pact provided for the withdrawal within two months of the majority of the troops who invaded Czechoslovakia Aug. 20. No numbers were disclosed.

Military experts who estimated the invasion force at more than 600,000 men now estimate that all but about 70,000 occupation troops have left the country.

Most of the remaining troops are reported camped outside major cities in barracks of the Czechoslovak army. The experts say there is no evidence of unusual troop concentrations near the West German border despite much Moscow talk about Soviet troops being needed to defend Czechoslovakia against West Germany.

Residents of Milovice, 25 miles northeast of Prague, say two divisions of some 50,000 officers and men are still at a base there. Military experts say this is one of the largest Soviet camps in the country.

Meanwhile, the Czechoslovak National Assembly today began a three-day session to approve a new federal government which is expected to include many old members but also reflect a shift in power to "realists" who accept restraints demanded by Russia.

An unofficial list of nominations for government posts made no mention of reformist assembly leader Josef Smrkovsky, whom Russia is anxious to see removed from a position of influence but who still holds immense popularity among students and workers.

His future will not be decided before January when the leadership of the assembly is considered, Deputy Premier Petr Colotka said Tuesday.

Alexander Dubcek, as secretary of the Communist party, is not involved in the government appointments.

Cernik is expected to remain head of the government when the new Czech and Slovak republics enter a federal government structure Jan. 10.

But, observers said, more "realists" are expected to be appointed in place of progressives, as has happened within the party.

HEADS THE LIST

Sources said the list of nominees, drawn up by the party central committee last week, was headed by Cernik, Colotka, Frantisek Hamouz, Samuel Faltan and Vaclav Vales were named deputy premiers.

Hamouz is a deputy premier in the present government and Vales is minister of foreign trade.

The probable new foreign minister will be Jan Marko, a Slovak and newcomer to the government. Defence Minister Martin Dzur, who previously was thought likely to resign for health reasons, and Interior Minister Jan Pelnar, probably will retain their posts.

Frantisek Vlasak, who was vacationing in Yugoslavia at the time of the Aug. 20 invasion and later resigned, is again named minister of economic planning.

The federal government will take office when the country is officially divided into separate republics.

U.S., EGYPT MAY RESUME RELATIONS

UNITED NATIONS (WP)—Egypt and the United States have tentatively agreed to resume diplomatic relations with simultaneous announcements early in the new year, an Arab source said Tuesday.

U.S. officials acknowledged that talks had been in progress. While they did not confirm the details, they said an early resumption of diplomatic ties "is not impossible."

Other western diplomats said Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser had broached the matter most recently to President-elect Nixon's special envoy, former Pennsylvania Governor William Scranton, while the latter was in Cairo two weeks ago on a fact-finding tour of the Middle East.

Flu Epidemic Near 'Disaster'

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Red Cross calls the influenza epidemic in the United States a "disaster situation," and the health commissioner in New York, the hardest-hit city, predicts it will even be worse there by New Year's Day.

Health Commissioner Edward O'Rourke estimated Tuesday that 500,000 New Yorkers—one in every 16—had recovered from the flu in the last two weeks.

O'Rourke said 300,000 persons were currently in the most critical stage of the disease. And he predicted that the city's epidemic would peak during the first week in January.

Meanwhile, reports of outbreaks of respiratory illnesses including Hong Kong flu continued to come from all sections of the country.

The Red Cross asked its chapters to provide workers and supplies to hospitals, schools and nursing homes. Hospitals through the country restricted visits in order to avoid exposing patients to the flu virus.

Many public schools and colleges were closing early because of high incidences of respiratory disease.

Eighty thousand doses of Hong Kong flu vaccine arrived at the New York City health department Tuesday. They will be distributed to medical facilities for administration to the elderly and to other persons considered likely to catch the disease.

Twenty thousand doses of the vaccine are being administered at medical facilities in lower Michigan.

EVIDENCE indicates Leonid Brezhnev's leadership position in the Kremlin is stronger than-ever after four years in power. The energetic general secretary of the Soviet Communist party celebrates his 62nd birthday Thursday.

NO FLAMES, NO SMOKE, JUST SUNSET

GRANTHAM, Eng. (UPI)—Five firemen were called out on an emergency in a pouring rain to look at a sunset.

A motorist had spotted what he thought was a fire opposite the town's iron works and telephoned police. Minutes later, with sirens blaring, the firemen arrived to find no smoke, no flames, just a blood-red sunset.

"It was a very nice sight," fireman Robert Duddles said. "You don't expect to see a beautiful sunset on such a rainy day."

FREE DRINK SURE CURE

NEW YORK (UPI) — A novel method of helping to prevent its employees from getting sick with the flu has been devised by a New York form.

Each afternoon, Edward Gottlieb and Associates gives its 80 employees a glass of orange juice mixed with cognac.

"We have had very little absenteeism," said William Kaduson, a senior vice-president.

The company represents French cognac producers in the United States.

House to Probe Smoking Dangers

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons health committee on Thursday begins what is expected to be a thorough and protracted investigation into the hazards of smoking.

The committee will have before it at least six bills from MPs in three political parties as a basis for its inquiry.

The committee is scheduled to hear a statement Thursday from Health Minister John Munro and then, late in January, begin calling witnesses.

Committee chairman is Gaston Isabelle, a medical doctor Liberal MP for Hull.

Isabelle said in an interview Tuesday the committee will call as witnesses representatives of the Canadian Cancer Society and other health organizations, of the tobacco and advertising companies and of the CBC and CTV television networks.

"It's going to be a big production," said Barry Mather, NDP member for Surrey who gave up smoking some years ago and has been a leader in the movement to impose controls on cigarette advertising.

Three of the bills before the committee are sponsored by Mather.

One would enable the Canadian Radio-Television Commission to make regulations to control or prohibit cigarette advertising. Another would give the cabinet power to regulate the labelling, packaging and advertising of tobacco products and a third would extend provisions of the Food and Drugs Act against fraudulent advertising and selling to tobacco products.

Antonio Yanakis, Liberal MP for Berthier, has two bills before the committee. One would require cigarette manufacturers to label their products as a serious health hazard and the other would enable the Canadian Radio-Television Commission to prohibit cigarette advertisements in any form.

'Fails to Understand Strip Mine Concern'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Howard Paish, executive director of the British Columbia Wildlife Federation, Tuesday accused Mines Minister Frank Richter of erroneous statements, pettiness, and failure to understand the federation's concern over strip mining hazards.

Mr. Paish said in a statement that charges by Mr. Richter that a federation brief prompted a controversial television film on strip mining are totally inaccurate.

He said the federation brief, which criticized the makeup of a mines department committee investigating the subject and called for a task force study, was prepared two weeks after the film was run by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Mr. Paish also protested a suggestion by Mr. Richter that he wouldn't consider the federation brief because it wasn't submitted directly to him.

He said the brief had been submitted to the deputy mines minister in accordance with instructions by former Mines Minister Donald Brothers.

Mr. Paish also attacked a statement by Mr. Richter that strip mining in the U.S. had critical effects which do not apply in B..C

'EVADE QUESTIONS'

He added: "It is disappointing to see a minister of the Crown evade answering questions raised in the report by making vague, unsubstantiated criticisms."

Mr. Richter had also said some of the points in the brief were factually incorrect, but declined to list them.

"This is getting close to the season of goodwill and there is quite a moral to be learned from the story of Bambi and his mother — 'If you can't say anything good about it, don't say anything at all'."

Lawyer to Carry NDP Colors

BURNABY — Jim Lorimer, lawyer and alderman in this Vancouver suburb, Tuesday was chosen New Democratic Party candidate for the Jan. 13 provincial byelection in Burnaby-Willingdon.

Meanwhile, Conservatives decided not to run a candidate because the party has no leader. Its executive is scheduled to meet next month to select a date for a leadership convention.

FUTILITY OF FLIGHT SHOWN

F-111 Wins Never-Fly Award

KITTY HAWK, N.C. (AP) —Sixty-five years ago Tuesday — Sixty-five years ago today Dayton, Ohio, bicycle makers Orville and Wilbur Wright made man's first successful heavier-than-air flight.

Orville made the first successful flight, having won the privilege by a toss of a coin. He flew 120 feet and remained in the air 12 seconds.

The brothers made three more flights that day, the longest 852 feet in 59 seconds by Wilbur.

KILL DEVIL HILLS, N.C. (AP) — The top award of the Man Will Never Fly Memorial Society for 1968 goes to the U.S. defence department for the controversial F-111 jet fighter program.

The society announced Monday night it is awarding its citation to the department for "a consistent and overwhelmingly convincing demonstration of the futility of flight."

"At a taxpayers' cost of $7,000,000 per machine," the society said, "the air force alone has crashed nine F-111s, not to mention those which have plummeted to earth in what are called 'unrelated testing incidents.'"

The Man Will Never Fly Society was formed in 1959 as a spoof of the Kill Devil Hills Memorial Society, which sponsors an annual observance of the Wright Brothers' first flight.

It's membership, which comes from several states, has adopted the motto: "Birds fly, men drink."

Canada's Pied Piper To Woo Japanese

OTTAWA (CP) — Bobby Gimby, the pied piper of Canada's centennial, goes to Japan next month where he will appear in a half-hour special on NHK, the Japanese national television network.

The show will be televised Jan. 3 from the still-to-be-completed site of Canada's pavilion at Expo 70, Japan's world fair.

The Saskatchewan-born trumpeter said in an interview Tuesday he will lead in song about 100 school children from the Canadian Academy in Japan and from Japanese schools. They will sing the Cana-da song that he composed for Canada's centennial and other selections.

The children will sing in English but the commentary will be in Japanese. Canada, host of the previous world fair at Montreal in 1967, was the first country to agree to take part in the 1970 event in Japan.

Journals Feel Pinch From New Post Rates

TORONTO (CP) — Spokesmen for several professional journals say they may have to reduce the quality of their publication or publish less frequently because of higher postal rates that become effective April 1.

Dr. Arthur Kelly, managing editor of the weekly Canadian Medical Journal, says that to continue providing a service The Journal may have to be come a monthly or semi-monthly publication.

Dr. Kelly says he expects postage fees to increase to $140,000 a year from the present $18,000.

DISASTROUS EFFECT

Dr. Kelly says the increase is more than can be borne without a disastrous effect on the publication.

The new rates increase postage to five cents from 1.75 cents a pound for the first two ounces and three cents for each two additional ounces.

Periodicals with a circulation of more than 10,000 will pay four cents for the first two ounces and three cents for each two additional ounces.

The Journal has a circulation of 23,000.

Arnold Raison, managing editor of the Canadian Pharmaceutical Journal, says his costs will go up about 29 per cent.

Last year, the cost of the Journal was $34,274, of which $1,860 was spent on postage. His 1969 estimate is $40,000, with postal costs being $11,759.

Drive Successful

WINNIPEG (CP)—The United Way of Winnipeg surpassed its goal for 1969 Monday when receipts of $2,994,025 were announced. Campaign chairman D. S. Rogers said the amount, almost $73,000 more than was raised last year, represented 100.03 per cent of this year's goal.

711 Entries In Bastion Contest

Bastion Theatre's poster-coloring contest, promoting the Christmas holiday musical Peter Pan which opens Dec. 26 at the McPherson Playhouse drew 711 entries.

Winners of free tickets to Peter Pan were picked by Peter Pan himself (Margaret Martin).

Winners six years and under were Melody Houle, 573 Manchester; Fred Smale, 129 Maddock East; Sheila Hill, 569 St. David; Laura Woods, 6720 Woodward Drive, Brentwood Bay.

In the seven to 12 years group, winners were: Susan Thompson, 3156 Balfour Avenue; Phileen Dickinson, 1525 Esquimalt Road; Eddy Baptista, 455 Beta Street; Robert Day, 4 Woodville Place.

In 13 years and over winners were: Lisa Knowles, 4073 Grange Road; M. A. King, 1903 Maple Avenue, Sooke; Jantina De Jong, 661 Head Street; Gurdish Bashi, 3070 Albany Street.

Largest number of entries received were in the seven to 12 age group. Youngest entrant was two.

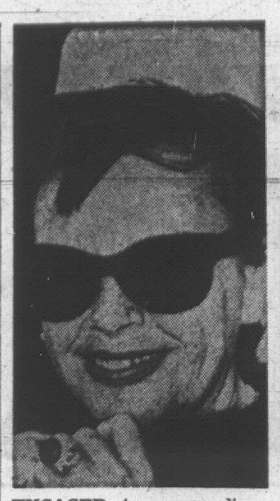
Recreation Poll Set In Oak Bay

The Oak Bay Recreation Commission is planning a poll of residents to determine their wishes in the way of leisure and recreation facilities.

Chairman Mrs. M. I. Craig said Tuesday the commission is working out a list of survey questions to send out in the New Year.

"We're trying to help council in their planning program," she said. "We want to ask people what sort of facilities they want."

Council is studying suggestions to the commission for the opinion survey, which they hope will assist towards a possible referendum early in 1969.



ENGAGED to marry discotheque manager Mickey Deans in London Dec. 30 is singer Judy Garland, whose four previous marriages ended in divorce. She said she had known Deans, 35, a New Yorker, for three years.

Program Features Chinese Carol

Pupils singing carols in German, French, Italian, Spanish, Latin and English will form part of a Christmas presentation at Sacred Heart elementary school tonight.

The carols will intersperse a reading of the Christmas story.

The presentation starts at 7 p.m. and the public is welcome. Bishop Remi de Roo will speak briefly.

Other musical features of the program include a Chinese carol and the Huron Indian carol. Children will carry "flashlight" candles.

SECRET ADMIRER

$250,000 Estate To Former Actress

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A secret admirer who apparently met former actress Dolores Moran just once, 27 years ago, has left her what might amount to a $250,000 inheritance.

"What a beautiful thing," said she. "It's phenomenal."

Unfortunately, she added, she doesn't remember him.

Anthony Ponce, a bachelor, died last September in nearby Sunnyvale at 58. In his will, filed Monday in probate court, he left $6,000 to relatives and a 10-acre orchard worth more than $250,000 to the actress.

His lawyer, Joseph De Gioia, said Ponce apparently thought he was taking care of relatives first. He said Ponce probably didn't realize how much the orchard, worth $1,000 in 1941, increased in value.

Now it's in the middle of an exclusive housing development.

Miss Moran apparently met Ponce when she was 15 years old and hostess for the opening of a restaurant in San Jose.

Miss Moran played bit parts in movies, then second leads and married a producer.

She quit acting, then was divorced from the producer, Ben Bogeaus, two years ago, she said. Bogeaus died last August. They had one son, now studying in England.

Actress Gets Divorce

LONDON (AP) — Swedish actress Britt Eklund was granted an uncontested divorce from British comedian Peter Sellers today on grounds of cruelty. Sellers, 43, was not in court for the hearing. Miss Eklund, 25, came from Stockholm to attend.

CZECHS FLOCK TO BALLET

PRAGUE — (Reuters) — The first performance of the Royal Winnipeg Ballet on its current five-day tour of Czechoslovakia brought out a sell-out crowd in the east Slovak city of Kosice Tuesday, Prague television reported.

The ensemble which recently won first prize in an international dance competition in Paris will appear in Bratislava today with further performances in Brno and Prague.

Big Assessment Hike Faces North Saanich

A major increase in North Saanich assessment next year is predicted by municipal clerk Michael Allen.

Since the start of the year, assessors have been re-assessing land value in the three northern peninsula municipalities — Sidney, North and Central Saanich.

"Property value have increased in this municipality more than any other district," he said. "I've warned council of a major increase."

He said the value of waterfront property has been increasing at about 25 per cent a year.

"That's a conservative estimate," he said.

Waterfront sells today at about $300 a waterfront foot.

Sooke Aiming For March 29 Schools' Vote

The Sooke school board Tuesday night approved forwarding a referendum submission totalling $1,894,545 for department of education study.

In presenting the figures to trustees, district superintendent Ernest Hyndman emphasized they were a rough estimate, a starting point for negotiation with the department which must approve them.

Target for taking the referendum to the voters is March 29. It will be the Sooke school district's seventh.

The submission shows $1,433,000 for buildings, $179,145 for sites, $138,400 equipment, $86,000 for plans and supervision and $58,000 for contingencies.

THREE SCHOOLS

Money is included for four new school sites and three new schools.

Among established schools, money for land, additions and equipment has been earmarked for Belmont senior secondary, Glen Lake elementary, Elizabeth Fisher junior secondary, Dunsmuir junior secondary, Happy Valley elementary, Metchosin elementary, Millstream elementary, Port Renfrew elementary, Saseenos elementary and Edward Milne secondary.

Mr. Hyndman told trustees in September that the school district is faced with an estimated enrolment increase of 36 per cent over the next three years.

This means the 4,959 pupils now in the district will grow to 6,740 by September of 1971. A preliminary estimate calls for 50 more classrooms to meet the expansion.

Three Years Fatality Free . . . Let's Keep It That Way

By ED GOULD

LAKE COWICHAN — Anyway you look at it there's not much pavement and an awful lot of mud and gravel under the jurisdiction of Lake Cowichan's busy RCMP detachment.

And the remarkable part is that there hasn't been a road fatality here in more than three years.

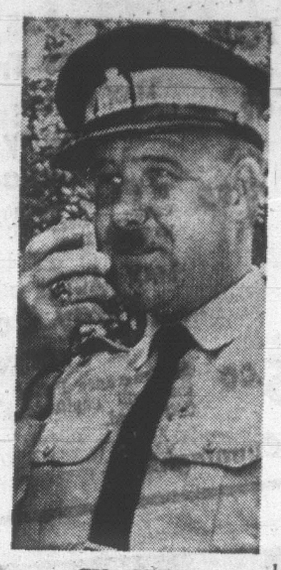
The last one occurred Sept. 11, 1965, when a driver fell asleep and smashed into a tree stump.

Corporal Scott Coxen and only two constables patrol this large area from Paldi — nine miles west of Duncan—to the west coast of Vancouver Island, and from a southern point 12 miles west of Shawnigan Lake to 10 miles east of Port Renfrew.

The only paved road is from Paldi, where the Lake Cowichan detachment's territory starts, to Cowichan Lake and from here northwest to Youbou and west to Honeymoon Bay — a total of 28 miles.

"These are darn good gravel roads though," Cpl. Coxen said in an interview, "and we've had lots of accidents but I've been amazed at some of the accident victims who are still mobile.

"Our biggest headache isn't on the logging roads, it's on that maniac stretch of highway between here and Duncan."



CPL. COXEN
. . . happy driving

That stretch gets especially busy on weekends when loggers from Caycuse, Nitinat and Gordon River and the residents of Honeymoon Bay, Lake Cowichan Youbou and Mesachie Lake make for "the big city."

Going the other way are campers, tourists, fishermen and sightseers taking advantage of open logging roads and the shorter back route to Port Alberni through Franklin River.

Cpl. Coxen and his men keep a close watch on the road.

With the festive season at hand, Cpl. Coxen has only one wish and that is that his unbroken fatality-free years be allowed to continue.

Glue-Sale Curbs Urged by Winch

NANAIMO — Former magistrate Eric Winch says glue-sniffing by youngsters in the community could be virtually stopped overnight without the aid of police or other authorities.

"Every storekeeper in town, whether he handles nail polish remover or what we know as airplane gule, should just impose a "no sale" to anyone under the age of 18.

"I do not say that this would completely stop all experimentation but it would certainly curtail most of it."

The Liberal candidate in the Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands byelection was commenting on a statement by Dr. S. E. Jensen that drug-taking in the area is reaching epidemic proportions.

Availability and use of marijuana must be the concern of every parent in the area, said Mr. Winch.

MORE SERIOUS

But the increase in glue-sniffing has far more serious implications because of the age of youngsters involved.

"We all get in a stew over marijuana but no-one seems to care that any youngster can walk into many stores and without question purchase the ingredients to destroy his mind or possibly kill himelf."

There is a drug problem, but it is not confined to Nanaimo, Mr. Winch said.

"Throughout North America the authorities have been grappling with the situation for the past two or three years."

During his years on the bench he said he was aware, as were the RCMP, that marijuana could be obtained.

"But we were also aware that the serious purchasers and smokers of the drug were few. To the bst of my knowledge the situation remains relatively the same today."

NO CRITICISM

Mr. Winch said his comment should not be construed as a criticism of Dr. Jensen's statement nor as a challenge to it.

"Whether Dr. Jensen's fears are justified or not, I think he has done a service to the community by making us all, once more, aware that there is a problem," he said.

"I believe Dr. Jensen's comments emphasize that bulk possession and selling of marijuana are serious criminal offences. No one playing with narcotics should ever stand up and say that he or she were not aware of the possible consequences," he said.

"And in view of the concern of the superior court of this province, and the probable consequences of a jail sentence on conviction, his words should be heeded.

"Let everyone remember that one use, the finding of one particle of marijuana in posession after a party, is sufficient to lead to conviction and a sentence of ordinarily six months in jail."

Two New Bridges For W. Coast Road

A total of $310,000 will be spent on two new bridges on the West Coast Road between Jordan River and Port Renfrew.

They are at Rosemond and Clinch Creek, a highway department official said Tuesday.

Low Calorie Drinks Okay

By BOB MITCHELL
Uvic Correspondent

Canadians who consume low calorie soft drinks have nothing to fear from their artificial sweeteners, a spokesman for the food and drug branch of the federal health department said Tuesday.

Larry Devlin, Vancouver director of the branch was commenting on a release by the American Food and Drug Administration which warned Americans against excessive consumption of diet drinks.

Main concern of the American bureau is the effects of cyclamates, most commonly used artificial sweetener in the soft drinks.

Mr. Devlin said the warning probably doesn't apply to diet drinks bottled in Canada.

"We have a list of restricted sweeteners," he said. "We're satisfied that they (cyclamates) are safe for dietary use."

He said artificial sweeteners have been thoroughly studied in recent years, and their use in popular drinks has been approved.

It is possible local manufacturers are using a combination of two artificial sweeteners in their products, cyclamates and saccharines, he added.

"Every once in a while a hue and cry comes up over cyclamates," he said, "but it's usually nothing much to hang your hat on."

An advisory committee to the American FDA reported recently cyclamates "present no hazard" to the average user who seems to consume diet drinks in moderate quantities.

The committee made no attempt to translate its technical findings into language the layman could apply to the beverages. Five grams or less a day of calcium cyclamate sweetener "should present no hazard" to an adult, the report states.

According to the Washington Post, an earlier FDA report says a 12-ounce bottle of one pop has 0.6 of a gram of the artificial sweetener.

But Food and Drug administration findings do not agree with more conservative UN Food and Agricultural Organization recommendations which say in effect a 60-pound child should not consume more than 1.35 grams per day — a bit more than two bottles of pop.

The report released Friday said no adverse effects have yet been observed in persons who have consumed five grams a day or less of calicum cyclamate.

It did say persons who consume more than five grams might experience "a minimal laxative effect."

CUTTER LANDS IN N. ZEALAND

AUCKLAND (AP) — A 62-year-old Briton has reached New Zealand after an 18,000-mile voyage in a two-masted cutter. Pharmacist Alan Baty-Scott of Weybridge, Surrey, set out from London two years ago in the 54-foot Svanen, an 84-year-old former Danish customs vessel.

WASHINGTON SCHOOL CLOSES

WAPATO, Wash. (AP)—The absence of more than 500 pupils and teachers has forced closure of Wapato public schools until Jan. 2, superintendent Robert Dealhome, sick himself, reported Tuesday.

Absentees, believed mostly the result of a flu epidemic, also were reported "rather high" in the Selah school district, but most other Yakima Valley school districts said attendance was near normal.

Elderly, Crippled Sisters Found Lying in Filth, Money

TORONTO (CP) — Two emaciated elderly sisters—one of them blinded by cataracts, the other crippled—were taken to hospital Tuesday after they were found in their unheated house lying amid piles of rubbish.

Firemen, who received a weak-voiced telephone call for help from one of the sisters, had to break down a door to enter their four-room suite.

They found Alice Dutton, 71, and her sister, Hettie, 76, lying in the garbage-filled room. Alice, with badly ulcerated legs, was on a mattress. Hettie was lying on the floor covered by a fur coat.

Both are in satisfactory condition in Western Hospital.

Firemen and police found a cardboard box near them, containing hundreds of dollars. In another room was a bank passbook with a balance of more than $500 and six uncashed old-age pension cheques.

One of the sisters refused to leave the house on Argyle Street, on the western fringe of downtown Toronto, without the box of money.

Edward Norris, Toronto district fire chief, said Hettie told him she and her sister only wanted a nurse and asked not to be taken to hospital because "we've been there before and we weren't treated very well ther."

Chief Norris said Hettie told him neither of them had been able to walk since June.

CRAWL THROUGH GARBAGE

"There were paths made through the garbage where they had crawled—just like animal tracks," Chief Norris said. "The one on the mattress looked like a skeleton with just a bit of flesh on."

Hettie, who has cataracks, said she had fallen and could not be of any help to her sister. It was she who telephoned the fire department to ask for help.

Chief Norris said when his men arrived they thought at first they had come to the wrong house. The bottom and third floors of the building were vacant.

"We went all over the place and couldn't hear a sound," he said. "Finally, we came to the locked door on the second floor and forced it with our shoulders."

Inside, both sisters were found half-frozen. Their only source of heat was a small, coal-burning heater which had gone out. The room was knee-deep in garbage and tables and chairs were littered with debris.

Six bags of coal sat in the room and about 30 paper bags filled with coal ash were stacked on the floor.

Many of the windows had been broken and empty coal bags had been shoved into the holes. Water pipes in the building had burst because of the cold and water poured from a third-floor bathroom into an overflowing sink in the kitchen and then down through the ceiling of an empty room on the ground floor.

Leave Gibraltar UN Tells Britain

UNITED NATIONS—The General Assembly trusteeship committee Monday night called on Britain to end its 263-year-old control of Gibraltar by next October.

United Nations committees usually take a pro-Spain stance on the question, but this was the first instance of a time limit being added.

At Cordova Bay
With Lovely Sea Views
There is a Home and
Not Just "A House"

THERE IS, AFTER ALL, A DIFFERENCE

Many homes have three bedrooms, spacious living and dining areas, well planned kitchens, full basements with completed entertainment room and secondary plumbing. The "difference" is—who has occupied this home? Have they cared for it? Did it mean to them what it would mean to me? Could I take this home over and not spend a dollar on renovations?" In this case the answer is YES. This is a HOME with the facilities briefly outlined. It merits viewing at a leisurely pace. No five minute run through. If this sounds interesting please phone Mr. Simpson, Res. 385-7369. Viewing really is BY APPOINTMENT.

IT IS OFFERED AT $32,900. CLEAR TITLE. EXCLUSIVE.

BEACH DRIVE

FISH EGG PLUNDER PROTESTED

DUNCAN—Catching fish just to obtain the eggs for bait is causing increasing concern to conservationists, Vancouver Island wildlife federation president Arnie Williams says.

Mr. Williams said the federation is not worried about the average fisherman who takes the legal limit but against people who make repeated trips just to get fish eggs.

Eggs are obtainable from canneries where it is considered waste material, he said.

Cowichan Fish and Game Association decided a province-wide resolution will be sought to take steps to protect eggs except where sold correctly labelled and weighed in commercial outlets.

Parole Board Delay Draws Sharp Rebuke

VANCOUVER (CP) — Coroner Glen McDonald of Vancouver criticized the National Parole Board Tuesday for failing to reply to a request for parole from a prisoner known to have fatal cancer until after the man had died.

The coroner made the criticism after an inquest into the death Dec. 12 of Amelio Joseph Albertini, 55.

The inquest was told parole board took nearly two months to make a reply to Albertini's request for clemency. The reply was a refusal.

"In this day of instant communicaions, the board should have given its decision before he (Albertini) died of cancer," said Mr. McDonald.

"But, ironically, their refusal came three days after he had died of cancer — the very reason he had made the request for parole."

Raymond Wilson, superintendent of Mountain Prison in Agassiz, where Albertini was an inmate from March 18 until May 17, said the prisoner had one son in Victoria.

Santa Uses Workboat, Helicopter

Santa Claus will arive in a helicopter or workboat when he brings toys and goodies to children at the 32 lighthouses dotting the coast between Race Rocks and Cape Scott.

Plying the 550-mile round in the Canadian Coast Guard supply vessel Camsell, Santa either ferries to shore in a workboat or flies in the ship's Bell helicopter as he brightens the Christmas season for children.

Making his third annual Christmas tour, Santa will again become the Camsell's chief steward George Thomas when the trip is over.

Employees of the department of transport's Victoria marine agency provide funds for the presents.

Tense Racial Situation In Halifax Area Defused

HALIFAX (CP) — A tense racial situation that threatened to erupt into major trouble earlier this month appears to have been de-fused by wholesale government concessions and efforts by the Nova Scotia Negro community to find a consensus.

The appearance of a handful of militant Black Panthers here late in November raised fears of racial strife. The situation did not get so bad largely because of the unexpected type of discrimination they encountered here, according to a Negro spokesman.

"Black Panthers who came here told me they felt misled about conditions here. . . . Someone fed them poor information. . . . They were told conditions were terrible," says Rev. Wrenfred Bryant, past moderator of the African United Baptist Association of Nova Scotia.

This was borne out by T. D. Pawley of Boston, a Black Panther, who told reporters he found subtle but not open discrimination and tension in the Halifax-Dartmouth area, home for almost half of Nova Scotia's 15,000 Negroes.

His organization stood ready to help blacks here to fight for equal opportunity but it was up to the black community to decide what assistance it wanted.

PREPARED REPORT

He and an aide held meetings with Negro leaders and said they prepared a report for Stokeley Carmichael's visit here earlier following a black writers' conference in Montreal.

A human rights conference which followed is regarded by many as having come just in time to avert a confrontation between blacks and whites.

Premier G. I. Smith pledged at the conference that his province would set an example in human rights legislation and then proceeded to outline immediate changes contemplated by his government.

These included increases in fines for discrimination levied under the Human Rights Act; public inquiries following complaints of discrimination to be made mandatory and complaints and inquiries published; charitable, philanthropic, educational and social organizations to be brought under the act; the Human Rights Act to be enforced by local agents in provincial centres and the act to apply to all housing of more than one self-contained unit.

He also promised a determined effort to meet Negro demands for better education and housing, more jobs and assistance to young people with talent.

NAMES WHITE MAN

His announcement of a director for the provincial human rights commission, a long-awaited appointment, however, created an uproar when it became known he was a white man.

Marvin Schiff, 31, of Toronto was the target of the outcry by Negroes who had expected a black man to receive the appointment.

Mr. Schiff said he would make "damned sure" that things he wanted to happen for minority groups in the province did happen "or else I resign."

"The conference was successful in that the premier agreed to accept our demands . . . but it showed the lack of a black consensus," said Dr. William P. Oliver, member of the provincial adult education staff and a former Baptist minister.

"You can't legislate goodwill, attitudes. . . . The problem is beyond legislation. . . . We have people who have to find themselves."

FORM UNITED FRONT

To try to achieve a consensus among the scattered Negro settlements in Nova Scotia an all-black meeting here in November formed a Black United Front as a "co-ordinating and catalytic body."

Dr. Oliver is chairman.

With the BUF scarcely off the ground, its aims and objectives still vague, it has already come under criticism from an older, more established Negro organization for its alleged tendency to think of achieving objectives immediately.

Ross Kinney, a layman, moderator of the African United Baptist Association which purports to speak for more than 90 per cent of Nova Scotia's Negroes, disassociated the AUBA from the front.

He is supported by Mr. Bryant, who disagrees with the structure of the BUF and thinks "there is a top echelon Halifax City group" while the problems are province-wide.

He fears that eventually the Nova Scotia Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the AUBA may become subservient to the "super committee."

Dr. Oliver feels the BUF can contribute to "a transition from the slave-master complex."

'Individual MPs Become Powerless'

TORONTO (CP) —A Liberal member of Parliament predicts individual MPs will become practically powerless once Prime Minister Trudeau's system of government-appointed regional advisers becomes effective.

Steven Otto, member for York East, said that when the 150 advisers begin reporting to "the all-powerful regional desks" in Mr. Trudeau's office it will be "like a giant Gatling gun."

Speaking to a local riding association Monday night, Mr. Otto said that once the system takes effect "I won't bother running, nor will others like me."

Mr. Trudeau announced the plan for regional desks and their advisers across the country in July. The advisers' jobs will be to relay local ideas to regional desks in Ottawa.

SEEK PUBLIC OIPNION

Mr. Trudeau has said they were designed to provide a "new sensitivity" to public feeling and needs across the country when shaping government policy.

The advisers poll opinion and check with key business, labor, farm and other people for reaction to government programs under consideration.

"Regional desks will be all-powerful," said Mr. Otto, adding that Mr. Trudeau "has fantastic support from the public and he's convinced he can keep it."

Mr. Otto said that under the new Trudeau system, MPs would have a new role and would come, not from the country at large, but from large establishment families.

"They'll go right into the House of Commons from college. It will be a career."

Young Voyageur Program Set For Next Year

DUNCAN — The Young Voyageur program, under which a group of students from out of the province exchanges visits with 12 local students, will be continued, Cowichan school board decided Monday night.

The 12 students from this district will join a similar group from the lower Island and, with two adult escorts, travel to some eastern city.

The seven-day visists take place during July and August. All travel expenses to and from main centres are paid for by the federal government and in addition some financial assistance will be provided, such as a $500 grant to the host community for reception expenses.

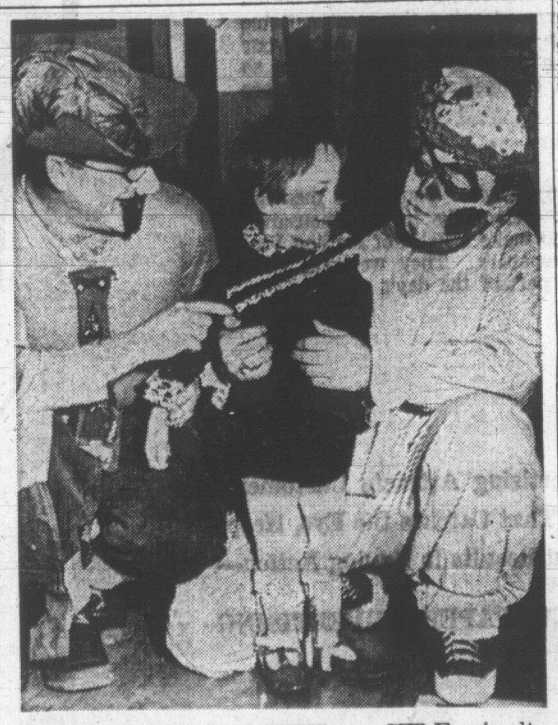
Divinity Student Wins Case

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Supreme Court has rapped selective service director Lewis B. Hershey for "blatantly lawless" use of the power to reclassify divinity students who protest the war in Vietnam.

But the court also upheld Hershey's basic power to reclassify most registrants free from court scrutiny until the draftee is in the army or goes on trial for refusal to be inducted.

The crucial difference, the court spelled out in two separate cases, is that ministers and divinity students enjoy a draft exemption beyond the reach of Hershey's system unless Congress grants him more power, while most other draft-age men are fully subject by law to rulings by their draft boards.

The rebuke to Hershey, who claimed broad "delinquency" reclassification powers over exempt as well as deferred registrants, came in a 6-to-3 decision in favor of James J. Oistereich, 24, a student at Andover-Newton Theological School near Boston, who received his 1-A notice after he turned in his draft card last year in a war protest.



SURROUNDED BY CLOWNS at a CFB Esquimalt Christmas party today, Jennifer gets tickled by two of 80 volunteers who put on the carnival and concert for more than 250 needy or handicapped local children. Dressed in her bright-red outfit, Jennifer, who will be six on Boxing Day, came down with the children from the cerebral palsy clinic school. With her are naval Warrant Officer Doug Kelly of Winnipeg Beach, Man., at left, and Air Force Cpl. Fred Wilson of New Glasgow, N.S. (Times Photo)

Winner in Recount

BURNABY (CP) — Bernice McDonough Tuesday won a Burnaby school board seat in a recount of Dec. 7 votes. The recount gave her 7,729 votes, two more than incumbent William Burke. Election night count had given Mr. Burke 7,704.

Conversation In Jail Cells Told Court

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) —A policeman posing as a prisoner in Saanich jail testified Tuesday that one man charged with non-capital murder accused another suspect of giving a statement to police about the slaying.

John Douglas Archer, a constable on the Saanich police force, said he overheard a conversation between Gary Hugh McWhirter, 24, of Sooke, and Fred Morry, 28, of no fixed address.

McWhirter and Morry are jointly charged with the March 14 non-capital murder of Victoria hotel clerk William Bruce van Munster, 24, whose decomposed body was found in July by police in woods near Victoria.

Const. Archer said he was placed in a cell as a prisoner at noon July 27. Morry was brought in first, and then McWhirter was put in a cell facing Morry.

Const. Archer testified the following conversation took place across the corridor as soon as the police left the cell block:

McWhirter: "Well, are you happy now, Fred?"

Morry: "What do you mean?"

McWhirter: "How do they know so much?"

Morry: "Don't ask me."

McWhirter: "How did they find out about the bar?"

Morry: "What bar?"

McWhirter: "You know what bar."

Morry: "You mean to R.O.?"

McWhirter: "Yes, the R.O."

Morry: "I wasn't in the R.O."

McWhirter: "You know better than that. McNeil sure knew about it. What did you do, give them a signed statement?"

Morry: "If I signed a statement, what am I still doing here?"

McWhirter: "You know me. Don't give me that."

Const. Archer testified that ended the conversation.

Earlier crown evidence before the all-male jury and Mr. Justice Craig Munroe showed that the "R.O." was the Royal Olympic Hotel beer parlor in Victoria where the accused drank, and "McNeil" was James Kenneth McNeil, a convict who in the witness stand testified McWhirter and Morry had beaten and kicked van Munster and that one had hit him with an iron bar.

SERVING TIME

McNeil, serving time in Prince George jail for attempted theft and possession of burglary tools, testified he was with McWhirter and Morry on the night of March 14 when the hotel clerk was slain.

Under cross-examination, McNeil testified that he had drank more than 30 glasses of beer on Mar. 14 from before 11 a.m. until midnight around Victoria beer parlors before leaving with Morry and McWhirter with the intention of breaking into a store. store.

Two gas station attendants, James Milne and Brian Allan, both of Saanich, testified that a car had pulled into their station, on the Trans-Canada Highway near midnight and that they heard someone pleading to be let out of the trunk.

Both witnesses said they took no action because one of two occupants of the auto said it was a stag party joke.

"I wasn't concerned," testified Brian Allan, 20. "I know strange things happen at stag parties."

The trial continues.

Lindsay's Popularity As New York Mayor Ebbs

By KEN PRITCHARD

NEW YORK (CP) — John Vliet Lindsay, tall, handsome and energetic, was elected mayor of this city in November, 1965, by a public fed up with the inability of a moribund Democratic administration to cope with growing urban problems.

After three years, the record of this 47-year-old liberal Republican shows both successes and failures.

One of the notable pluses is that New York City has not had a major racial riot since 1964. Other United States cities have heard the cry "Burn, baby, burn," many times since that year.

The fair-haired mayor, scion of one of the city's upper-class families, has been a familiar figure to the underprivileged as he has walked the streets where they live, intent upon establishing a nonvolatile climate.

But the Lindsay years have hardly been an unmitigated joy. Other crises of city management have dragged his popularity to a new low one year before his term in office expires.

Many of the problems of this big city—its annual budget totals $6,000,000,000—have hardly been dented by the combination of Lindsay and a Democratic-controlled city council. The problems of crime, air pollution, snarled traffic, an acute shortage of housing at reasonable prices and an inexorable rise in the numbers of people on relief remain pressing.

PLAGUED BY STRIKES

Lindsay has had to cope with one strike after another by the city's organized workers. There were walkouts and slowdowns by transit employees, garbage collectors, welfare workers, policemen and firemen.

And there was the big controversy over school decentralization, with its city-wide walkout of teachers that left 1,100,000 pupils without official instruction for all but 12 days between Sept. 9 and mid-November.

A major achievement, in addition to averting major race riots, has been Lindsay's attack on waste and inefficiency. Despite a rugged rearguard action by the city's entrenched bureaucracy, Lindsay has cut New York's hydra-headed administration to 10 departments from 99.

Lindsay disdains the oft-heard comment that New York City is ungovernable. And he regards his city as a pacesetter in the quest for solutions to urban problems.

"Every city will soon be going through what we're going through," he told an interviewer recently.

LINDSAY
... has problems

"I think New York is governable. But we've got to go through sound barriers."

DENIES BREAKDOWNS

He denies the suggestion that troubles such as the teachers' strike—which brought the largely Jewish teachers' union into direct conflict with Negro and Puerto Rican citizens—reflect a breakdown in labor and race relations.

"It's a transition from the old to the new," he says.

Some groups and individuals, he observes, are unable to face change; they react violently.

"They killed Martin Luther King with bullets. They killed Robert Kennedy with bullets. They'll kill more of the other moderates before they're through."

Lindsay regards himself as one of the moderates, trying to bring about peaceful evolution by sound reasoning and high-principled leadership.

"We must do what the British did and guide this revolution into peaceful channels. . . . They used the skills of their great moderate leaders, who stayed ahead of the tides and didn't allow the waves to drown them."

Lindsay gained early identification with the city's Negroes and Puerto Ricans, current occupants of the bottom rung of the economic ladder which other ethnic groups —such as the Irish, the Jews and the Italians have climbed to various levels of affluence.

SET UP POLICE BODY

He fought hard for a civilian review board which would have scanned complaints, chiefly from the ghettoes, of police brutality and misconduct. The board was turned down in a city-wide plebiscite, but Lindsay set up a police administrative body to perform a similar function.

He has obtained large sums of money from Washington to help finance many programs for the underprivileged, such as training and retraining of workers, pre-school education for children and temporary summer jobs for the armies of young people among which trouble breeds fastest.

The mayor's intensive cultivation of the black and Puerto Rican community through street forays and meetings with their spokesmen did not sit well with everyone.

Robert Low, a Democratic member of the city council and possible candidate for mayor in 1969, says: "He has concentrated his attention on the slum areas and raising standards for minority groups, without making the middle class feel he offers compensating programs for them."

A continuing white exodus to the suburbs is said to be partly the result of a feeling that white New Yorkers are being neglected.

Another factor in the exodus of the whites is the continued squeeze on their purses—through city income, real estate and sales taxes.

WELFARE COSTS SOAR

The biggest single item on the city's budget is public welfare, a direct result of heavy black migration from the South and the enduring influx of Puerto Ricans. Welfare costs have jumped 40 per cent since Lindsay came to office, with 20,000 cases a month being added to the relief rolls. The mayor has virtually no control over these expenditures, mandated by law.

But he did try to do something to improve the quality of education—and thereby brought on his most recent crisis.

Integration of schools by busing pupils to various parts of the city had failed to answer the complaints of poor education from the non-white community. So Lindsay backed a decentralization program; the monolithic city school board was to be broken down into area boards which would allow the citizens most intimately concerned to have a say in the schooling of their children.

The teachers' strike which followed had many ramifications, one of the most distressing for Lindsay being the racial overtones which split the alliance of white liberals and non-white poor which had been his basic political support. Two-thirds of the teachers' union members are Jewish, and Jews had been among Lindsay's firmest supporters at the polls.

First One Fined For Having Drug

A Saanich youth was fined $500 Tuesday and sentenced to one day in jail for possession of marijuana.

Howard Turner, 19, of 645 Baxter, is the first person here to be fined following a first conviction on the charge. Previously most persons have received jail terms and a few suspended sentences have been given.

Magistrate William Ostler imposed the sentence on the grounds it was a "special case" following a lengthy argument by defence counsel Robert Price.

Mr. Price referred to a recent case in Powell River where a similar sentence was given by a magistrate and upheld by the B.C. Court of Appeal. He said the higher court judgment stated a fine was a perfectly adequate deterrent in that case.

In previous drug cases central court has been told the Appeal Court has directed a jail sentence be given for a first offence in the absence of exceptional or extenuating circumstances.

MORE KNOWLEDGE

Mr. Price Tuesday suggested the higher court has now changed its mind due to a broader knowledge of the situation and has indicated a fine is adequate in such cases.

He asked the magistrate that this new direction be followed and noted there had been a consistent lack of uniformity of sentencing in the province in drug cases. He cited several cases in Victoria where suspended sentences had been given and others in outside jurisdictions where fines had been imposed.

He quoted the Appeal Court judgment in the Powell River case as stating imprisonment on such a conviction is not mandatory.

Magistrate Ostler said he did not agree that the Powell River case amounted to a direction from the Appeal Court but that it was a refusal to interfere with the magistrate's discretion in that case.

He said the higher court has never said imprisonment is mandatory and noted the use of marijuana is not prevalent in the other areas.

SPECIAL CASE

He said this was a special case which the pre-sentence report made clear. The magistrate said the accused was different from the usual defendant in these cases and there was nothing distasteful about him.

Mr. Price said the accused would be able to pay a fine himself. After sentencing, Magistrate Ostler told the lawyer it was important Turner paid it himself. He allowed him a month to pay.

Turner was charged jointly Oct. 20 with Kenneth Gerrard, 19, of 1821 Dunnett. The charge against Gerrard was dismissed.

During the trial court was told police officers entered a parking lot at the south end of Beaver Lake and saw one of the accused on a path about 200 feet away. They testified he made a "throwing movement."

A search with a police dog later turned up a bag containing a "green substance" said to be marijuana and another bag was found in the parking lot.

Before Magistrate

Fined $100 each, Monday for driving while under a licence suspension were James McLeod, 411 Bidwell, and George Nickolichuk, CFB Esquimalt.

Richard Guthrie, 1945 Mt. Newton Cross Road, was fined $100 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Wallace Henderson Young of Vancouver was sentenced Saturday to three months on two charges of contributing to juvenile delinquency.

Court was told the incidents involved a 16-year-old boy.

Fined $350 Saturday for impaired driving was James Elliot, 473 Thetis Crescent.

A man who admitted setting fires to three View Royal buildings earlier this month was sentenced Tuesday to two years in the penitentiary.

David Louttit, 205 Island Highway, pleaded guilty to three charges of arson Monday.

An 81-year-old woman was alone in one of the homes. Damage in each case was under $50.

Louttit, pleading for the mercy of the court, asked to be sent to a mental hospital for treatment.

Magistrate William Ostler said he couldn't send him there directly but that he would strongly recommend to the director of corrections that Louttit be transferred from the prison to a mental institution.

He said he felt sorry for the accused and that he appeared to be a pyromaniac.

The accused had been sentenced in 1961 to a two-year term on arson and mischief charges.

"You are a very dangerous man . . . you don't intend to be but you might have killed someone," Magistrate Ostler told Louttit.

"People can be guilty of murder if they set fires that kill people," he said.

On Monday RCMP Const. Colin Neilson said Luttit admitted setting fires to the property of Mrs. Rebecca Rutherford, 229 Island Highway, Mrs. F. Anderson, 221 Island Highway, and O. Speed, 40 View Royal Avenue. He said Mrs. Rutherford, who is 81, extinguished the small blaze under a porch.

Louttit told police he had been drinking, remembered several flashes and remembered going to several buildings where flashes took place. He said he called the fire department after setting the fires.

James Lauzon, 34, of No. 6, 1054 Princess, was sentenced to four months on charges arising from shoplifting nearly $700 worth of merchandise from local stores over the past four months.

"Life has not dealt easily with you, you have been unwell and I feel sorry for you," Magistrate Ostler said. "I think a short period in prison is what you require."

Last week Lauzon pleaded guilty to five charges of theft. Nearly all of the articles taken were found in his home. They included clothes, watches, jewelry and personal effects.

Roderick O'Toole, 34, of no fixed address, was sentenced to two and a half years in the penitentiary on a charge of robbery with violence.

He pleaded guilty earlier to the theft of $32 from an 87-year-old man Nov. 19.

The victim, Yong Chong, of 546½ Herald, suffered a wrist cut in the attack outside his residence just before midnight.

Magistrate Ostler referred to the incident as the vicious mugging of a helpless old man. He said it was repulsive and disgraceful conduct.

Glen Wright, no address available, was committed Monday for trial by county court judge on the same charge. He was arrested following the same incident and charged jointly with O'Toole, but pleaded not guilty.

Testifying in a preliminary hearing, Mr. Chong said he was about to enter his room Nov. 19 when two men grabbed him from behind. He said one of them struck him three times and the other held him from behind and took $32 from him.

He first identified Wright positively as the man that struck him but on cross-examination took back his statement, identified another man sitting in the gallery as the assailant, and said he had never seen Wright before.

The man he identified was O'Toole.

George Jones, representing Wright, said at the conclusion of the hearing that the court had seen a most terrifying and shocking thing in reference to the identification made by the complainant.

He said there was no evidence to warrant a committal.

Magistrate Ostler said if he was a judge he would have to dismiss the charge but that in the case of a preliminary hearing he was not a judge of the facts.

Wright has been in custody since his arrest Nov. 20 and will remain so until his trial next year.

Momcilo Filopavic, 2642 Forbes, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a $250 one-year good behavior bond on a charge of theft.

He pleaded guilty last week to taking an electric motor Nov. 27 from a dismantled building without permission from the owner.

Magistrate Ostler said the accused was to be admired because he had worked hard in life and was a good citizen. He said the conviction might not jeopardize his Canadian citizenship application.

Elaine Hnatiuk, 19, of 1340 Pandora, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a $250 one-year good behavior bond on a charge of causing a disturbance.

Magistrate Ostler said any court would be disturbed by the circumstances in this case where a 19-year-old girl had to continually leave her home because of parties.

Kenneth Moran, 1700 Emerson, and James Page, no address available, were remanded to Friday to fix a date for trial on charges of false pretences, selling LSD, and conspiring to obtain money by false pretences.

Earlier Moran elected trial by judge without a jury and Page on Tuesday elected trial by magistrate and pleaded not guilty.

Both youths are 18. Page has also been charged with possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking and selling LSD.

Trial dates have been set for Jan. 22 and 24 on these charges and Tuesday prosecutor Edward Pollard indicated he would b withdrawing the charge alleging an LSD sale.

Winterizing Geraniums

By HILDA BEASTALL

Zonal geraniums cause much worry during winter while being stored. These are the bedding geraniums with dark zones on the green leaves, and brilliant round heads of scarlet or salmon flowers. Occasionally we see the old double white, a particular favorite of mine.

Hilda

Two important factors enter into successfully keeping these plants during winter.

One is keeping them in the coolest place possible — but it must be free of frost, and it should have at least fair light.

Secondly, water must be given so sparingly that you might almost say they get none; but water at the roots and dampness around the stems are enemies in winter.

These two points are essential to know when keeping zonals under any conditions except a slightly heated greenhouse or a well-lit sunroom with a little heat.

With either of the latter types of winter accommodation, the plants may be given enough water to prevent complete drying of the soil.

Flower buds should be removed as soon as seen; decaying leaves also need prompt removal.

Cuttings which were taken last August while parent plants were full of bloom, should not be in three-inch pots. Don't expect, or encourage, young rooted plants to do a lot of growing in December and January.

See that they are not crowded, and keep the air around them as dry as possible.

As sun power increases towards the end of January, watering can be slightly increased. By re-potting before February is over, the gardener will have splendid well-budded geraniums to put out into beds and planters by the middle of May.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prize? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Steven Wayne, age 10, of Santa Maria, California, for his question:

Why is the Japanese Current Warm?

Majestic currents within the oceans sweep in eddying circles from the equator almost to the polar regions. They ignore the boundaries between tropical and temperate zones. Like the weather, they treat the globe as a single unit, a world-playing field for their stupendous activities.

Sailors and marine experts call it the Japan Current. The people of Japan call it Kuroshio, the Black Current. This sweeping wide stream within the ocean does indeed wash the shores of the islands of Japan, plus many other shores of the Pacific. But black is not the best word for it, though its waters are darker than the Pacific waters around it. Actually its color is a beautiful rich indigo blue, a deeper color than the top of the midsummer sky plus a tinge of violet.

The Japan Current is merely one section of a vast eddy of circling currents that swirl around and around through the North Pacific. Off Japan, it is warmer than the ocean around it because its streaming waters are swept along from warmer regions of the globe. So let's trace it back to its beginnings. This takes us southward to the equator, the wide waist of the world where the globe spins fastest and the tropical sun shines bright and warm all through the year.

Somewhat north of the equator, a mighty ocean current is driven westward by the prevailing trade winds that circle the globe. This North Equatorial Current of warm tropical water is the longest of any current in the world oceans. It sweeps from off the shores of Panama 9,000 miles due west across the Pacific to the Philippines. Here the island barrier forces most of the streaming warm water to turn northward. It brushes along the coastline of Asia, passing east of Formosa and onward to Japan. Its water from the tropics is still warmer than the sea around it. This warms the air above and brings a milder climate to the shores it brushes.

Loses Its Heat

From north of the Japanese islands, cold Arctic waters creep down into the northern Pacific. They merge in the chilly Oyashio Current. This section of the circling eddy is the Northeast Drift that reaches our Pacific coast and bends southward along the shores of California. At this stage it has lost its tropical warmth and it tends to make our Pacific coast weather cooler than it should be. Off lower California, the eddying current links up again with the North Equatorial Current. Here it is swept westward on that 9,000-mile journey where it soaks up tropical warmth for its next majestic swirl through the Pacific.

The North Atlantic has a similar cycle of currents on a smaller scale. The Gulf Stream compares with the Japan Current, but it is warmer, perhaps because the Atlantic cycle is smaller. The Gulf Stream is turned eastward by the cold Labrador Current. Off Newfoundland, where the warm and cold currents clash, we get a region of dense fogs and wild winds. The same wild weather occurs in the northern Pacific where the warm Japan Current clashes with the cold Oyashio Current.

★ ★ ★

Andy sends a World Book Atlas to Suzanne Mizzi, age 11, of Toronto, for her question:

Do planets have to revolve around the sun?

There are cosmic traffic laws that keep the heavenly bodies in their places. Breaking traffic laws on the heavens is downright certain to end in disaster. It is a very exact combination of forces which keeps a planet revolving around the sun.

This situation involved the cosmic laws of motion and of gravity, the quota of pulling force built into every small and massive object. The mighty gravity of the massive sun is strong enough to pull down all the planets into its seething furnace. In fact, it constantly pulls them downward like falling stones. The planets defend themselves by falling in a curved path — a curved path that orbits around and around the sun. The exact orbit of a planet is a precise ratio between its mass and the sun's mass and its distance from the sun. It orbits at the precise speed which keeps it from falling into the sun or from zooming off out of the Solar System.

YOUR HEALTH

There Are Two Types Of Anemia

By Dr. WALTER ALVAREZ

People should know that there are two types of anemia, the so-called primary anemia, that a person is probably born to get, and may have inherited the tendency to and which, after it once appears, lasts for the rest of the person's life. This type of anemia can be kept under good control with perhaps one dose of vitamin B12 a month.

Alvares

Then there is the secondary anemia which comes to a person who has been losing a lot of blood. Perhaps a women is flooding excessively during her menstrual periods, or a person has either badly bleeding hemorrhoids or an oozing cancer in the bowel or stomach, or a bleeding stomach ulcer. Such a person first must have the source of his loss of blood discovered, and then that source must be gotten rid of. Sometimes a woman who floods must have a hysterectomy. Then perhaps some iron should be given by mouth. With a secondary anemia, vitamin B12 is not the treatment. Also, it is not good treatment just to give iron without first finding whence blood is being lost, and then stopping that loss.

The primary, or pernicious anemia, has become so rare that for years I have not seen a case. Often the diagnosis can quickly be made. I will never forget a fine-looking young woman of 30 who with her children came into my office to say that she was feeling tired and weak and below par, but her main annoyance was a peculiar distress in the skin of her legs below her knees, where there was a tingling and a numbness and a feeling of pins and needles. Her legs felt dead or as if they did no belong to her.

I immediately asked her if she had the same feelings in the tips of her fingers and she said, "Yes, that is true. I can't pick up a pin from my sewing table as I used to do." I asked her if she had any trouble with digestion, and she said yes, she had a tendency to diarrhea. I asked her if she had been losing weight and she said that she had.

The point that interested me much was that her hair was completely gray. I asked her when it had started to turn gray, and she said, "When I was in high school." Textbooks seldom mention such early graying in cases of pernicious anemia, but it can be a warning symptom. I asked the woman who in the family had had anemia, and she said her mother had died of it—in the days before doctors knew how to treat the disease. Curiously, around 1905, a missionary told me that in China, the old doctors used to cure pernicious anemia by giving a liver soup. Before doctors got B12 we were able to help patients with pernicious anemia by giving them an extract of liver.

All I had to do for my woman patient that I have described, was to glance at a stained smear of her blood, and it was obvious that she had a 'primary anemia'. Some red cells were misshapen, and many contained more hemoglobin (red coloring matter) than normal cells should have had. I immediately started the women on B12 treatment, and in 2 days she felt like a new person.

A rather typical case of severe secondary anemia was that of a big powerfullly-built ranch wife from Wyoming who came complaining of bleeding piles. I found she had only half of her hemoglobin, or red coloring matter, left in her blood. She had a typical secondary anemia. The marvelous lesson that this women taught me was that she didn't feel at all tired or ill.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Canadian Convoy Had Narrow Escape

By BOB BOWMAN

In October the story was told of how the 1st Canadian Division in the First World War crossed the Atlantic to Britain threatened by German submarines.

Bowman

It was on Dec. 18, 1939, that the 1st Canadian Division for the Second World War arrived safely at Aldershot, England, commanded by Major General A. G. L. McNaughton. The voyage from Halifax to Greenock, Scotland, had taken only seven days but was not without incident. Winston Churchill, then First Lord of the Admiralty, sent a message saying "the arrival of the Canadians has warmed the cockles of our hearts."

The 1st Division sailed in five ocean liners: Aquitania, Empress of Britain, Empress of Australia, Duchess of Bedford, and Monarch of Bermuda. They formed a V around the battleship Resolution which was there to protect the convoy against surface raiders. Destroyers of the Royal Canadian Navy added protection for two days from Halifax.

Part of the trip was in heavy fog and the Empress of Britain nearly collided with the flagship Aquitania. When the fog lifted the Empress of Australia was missing. There was a great deal of worry about her being out on the Atlantic all alone, but at sunset a British cruiser appeared over the horizon and sent a lamp-signal to the battleship: "Luke 15:6." A glance at the Bible revealed: "Rejoice with me for I have found my sheep which was lost!" The Empress of Australia rejoined the convoy soon after. It is believed that her captain did not like convoys and took advantage of the fog to slip away.

On the last night at sea, when the convoy was guarded by a strong escort of Royal Navy warships, the liner Samaria, outward-bound from Liverpool, ran through the convoy in the blackout and collided with the Aquitania. Fortunately neither ship was badly damaged, but it was a close call.

Other events on Dec. 18:

1603 — De Monts was granted monopoly of the fur trade for 10 years.

1813 — British-Canadian force sacked Niagara, N.Y., and took 300 prisoners in reprisal for burning of Newark (Niagara on the Lake).

1854 — Bytown became Ottawa (officially Jan. 1). Seigneurial system in Canada was abolished.

1874 Federal government accepted Lord Dufferin's proposal to settle railway dispute with British Columbia.

1889—CPR telegraph system joined Atlantic cable at Canso, N.S.

1893 — Archbishop Mackray of Rupert's Land was elected first Anglican Primate of Canada.

1897 — Boundaries of Yukon, Franklin, and Ungava were changed.

1901 — Territorial Grain Growers organization was formed at Indian Head, Manitoba.

1950 — Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry arrived at Pusan, Korea.

First Ladies Now Hanging Together

By ELIZABETH FORBES

One of the least publicized changes in the Empress Hotel, and one that to me has been an outstanding success, is the re-grouping of the paintings of Canada's first ladies in the spacious lower hall.

Forbes

For years these paintings hung on the walls of the hotel's stately old dining room. They were widely separated and to see them it was necessary to make a grand tour.

Now arranged on the wall of the lower hall, they are gallery-grouped. Lighting is good, they are easy to see, and they should certainly be a conversation piece for hotel guests and casual visitors during this Yuletide season.

Each portrait has a nameplate attached with the dates when these women played a part in the Canadian story. Framed thumbnail sketches add viewing interest.

The collection has been a feature of the Empress Hotel since 1929. At that time the first 14 paintings were moved from the old Gold Room in the Royal Alexandra Hotel in Winnipeg (now a thing of the past) to the Victoria hotel which had that year opened a new wing including a new vice-regal suite (replaced in recent renovations by a newer vice-regal suite).

★ ★ ★

Earliest paintings up to and including Countess Gray (1904-11) are the work of Sydney Strickland Tully while the Duchess of Connaught, Duchess of Devonshire and Lady Byng were done by A. Dickson Patterson.

Portrait of Viscountess Willingdon and the Countess of Bessborough are by Juliet Lavoie of Montreal.

A delicate pastel of Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone (1940-46), was commissioned by H. F. Mathews, a former general manager of hotels for the Canadian Pacific Railway. It is the work of Charles J. Greenwood, a CPR artist and a graduate of Bradford School of Art in his native Yorkshire.

He also did the pastel of Susan Charlotte, Lady Tweedsmuir of Elsfield, who was Canada's first lady from 1935 to 1940.

Those who take time to read the background story will find the bits and pieces about these lovely women fascinating.

★ ★ ★

For instance, it was Mary Louisa, Countess of Elgin, here from 1847 to 1854, who revived the old French custom of a New Year's Eve ball. She was a daughter of Canada's pioneer first lady, Louise Elizabeth, Countess of Durham.

The countess was in Canada a brief five months in 1838. She and her husband, George Lambton, first Earl of Durham lived in the old citadel of Quebec.

Maud, Marchioness of Lansdowne (1883-88), was one of four sisters immortalized in Lord Beaconsfield's novel Lothair. One of these beauties was Lady Anne Hamilton. Later, the marchioness went with her husband to the vice-regal palace in India.

Years later, in 1916 to 1921, a Landsowne daughter, Evelyn, Duchess of Devonshire, became Canada's first lady. It is said she inherited her mother's beauty and grace which had so impressed Disraeli.

Another first lady who went on to the vice-regal throne in India, was Marie Adeliade, Countess of Willingdon, here from 1926 to 1931.

Ishbel, Countess of Aberdeen (1893-1898), was a philanthropist and reformer. She founded the Victorian Order of Nurses and was active in organization of the National Council of Women.

During the years 1867 to 1868 when Elizabeth, Viscountess Monck, was living in Quebec City, historic old Rideau Hall in Ottawa was purchased for future governors-general.

Many years later (1921-26), Lady Marie Evelyn Byng of Vimy, whose hobbies were gardening and writing, left a rock garden at Rideau Hall as a happy memory of her days in Ottawa.

She took Canadian wild flowers back to her garden in England. Her writings include two books Barriers and Anne of the Marshlands.

During regrouping of the paintings this year in the lower hall of the Empress Hotel, two new portraits were added. Those of Canada's beloved Mme. Vanier and the present chatelaine of Rideau Hall, Mrs. Roland Michener.

All of these first ladies have played their part in the story of Canada. We should be proud of them . . . and we should take time occasionally to look at their portraits and to remember them.

Bank Rates Hiked By Canada, U.S.

Price Boost Hint Stirs Gold Fever

Times News Services

Increases in the Canadian and United States official bank rates and uncertainty over the position President-elect Nixon will take on the price of gold set the international monetary pot boiling again today.

In Ottawa, the Bank of Canada announced an increase in the prime lending rate of one-half per cent to 6½ per cent effective today.

The change followed an announcement in Washington by the U.S. Federal Reserve Board that the bellwether discount rate was being moved up from 5¼ to 5½ per cent to bring it in line with other market rates and to counter "the resurgence in inflationary expectations."

The price of gold shot up to a six-month peak on European bullion markets.

Bank of Canada Governor Louis Raminsky expressed the "concern of the central bank over the persistence of inflationary price and cost increases in recent months" and he noted that "interest rates had recently risen in Canada and other countries."

U.S. inflationary expectations were further fed Tuesday by the biggest jump in industrial production in six months, by a 7 per cent spurt in housing starts during November and by further increases in personal income.

Worst Inflation in 18 Years

The U.S. is now in the midst of its worst inflation in 18 years. Consumer prices had their biggest monthly spurt in six years in October and have risen 4.6 per cent in the past 12 months — the steepest rise since the Korean War year of 1951.

After steadying the first part of the year, industrial commodity wholesale prices — considered by many analysts the best measure of inflation — turned up sharply in the fall.

The federal Reserve Board announced Tuesday that its index of output of the country's factories, mines and utilities rose from 165.7 per cent of the 1957-59 average in October to 167.4 per cent last month. This was the biggest increase since last May. The index now stands 4.8 per cent above a year earlier.

Major U.S. banks raised their prime interest rates on business loans a quarter of a point to 6¾ per cent today, the highest on record.

The rate increase was led by First National City Bank of New York and was immediately followed by Chase Manhattan, Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., Irving Trust Co., Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. and Bankers Trust Co. of New York and other banks.

In Canada the bank rate had been declining in sympathy with an easy-money trend since July 2, when it dropped to 7 per cent from the peak 7½ per cent that had prevailed since mid-March. It declined twice more at monthly intervals in the summer.

Just lately, rates have been climbing back in the money markets. Interest rates for funds on three-month loans crept up in November and moved ahead more sharply in the last two weeks.

Six-month funds were loaned at a relatively steady rate through November but moved ahead this month — an indication dealers expected borrowing to be costly for some time to come.

The price of gold shot up partly as a reaction to the bank rate increases and partly on the basis of speculation that the Nixon administration may raise the official price for the metal.

Increase Fiercely Resisted

Successive American governments have fiercely resisted any increase above the $35 an ounce the U.S. has been committed to pay since 1934.

But the refusal Tuesday of Treasury Secretary-designate David Kennedy to commit himself to defend the present official gold-dollar rate was taken by bullion dealers and speculators as a hint of changing thinking in Washington.

The price of gold jumped 60 cents at the morning fixing in London and 50 cents in both Zurich and Frankfurt. The London free market price was $41.825 U.S., the highest level since June 12, when it reached $41.90. It was $41.70 in both Zurich and Frankfurt.

London dealers said turnover was small. Demand was extremely heavy, but sellers were hanging on for a still higher price.

In Paris, an ounce of gold jumped from $43.59 at Tuesday's closing to $44.28. Over-all volume amounted to the franc equivalent of $3,300,000, up $865,000 from Tuesday. The all-time high for an ounce of gold in Paris was $45.36 on July 5.

In Washington Kennedy indicated that the Nixon administration would consider an increase in the price of gold — among other options — as one solution to international monetary problems.

KEEP OPTION OPEN

This surprising statement, the precise opposite of Johnson administration policy, was made and repeated in several different ways at his first Washington news conference.

Kennedy insisted that he wants "to keep every option open that the new administration should have" both on the fixed $35 price of gold, and more flexibility for currency exchange rates.

During the recent campaign, Nixon said that he saw "no need" for an increase in the $35 gold price. But this statement was usually coupled with the caveat that there was no need "once responsible economic policies are firmly established."

At that time, some observers felt that Nixon was providing himself with an "out," if a monetary crisis were to develop. Twice Tuesday, Kennedy referred to the November monetary uncertainties that threatened a devaluation of the franc.

"Nothing stays static," he said, "and we don't know what will follow this."

In an evident attempt to cool speculative fevers, Nixon's press spokesman, Ronald L. Zeigler, issued a statement in New York which said:

"The subject of any changes in the price of gold has not been discussed and we do not anticipate any changes...."

DEFIANT STUDENTS OCCUPY SORBONNE

PARIS (UPI) — A group of 3,000 students occupied the Sorbonne tonight in defiance of Premier Maurice Couve de Murville's warning such a seizure would not be tolerated.

Despite government orders against the seizure, several hundred police surrounding the three-block complex of university buildings in a pouring rain did not act.

The students milled around inside the corridors of the administrative wing, chanting "down with the police state" and other slogans demanding reforms of the universities.

The students held "agitation day" meetings throughout the day, then moved into the 700-year-old university on the left bank Latin quarter. The Sorbonne was the centre of last summer's riots.

The government earlier reversed its tough line against student agitators and it was thought the turmoil would die down. Instead it increased.

Calm Returns To Commons

OTTAWA (CP)—An early infusion of Christmas spirit Tuesday lifted the Commons out of the week-old battle over new rules into calmer debate on anti-dumping legislation.

Aiming at a holiday from Friday, Dec. 20, until Tuesday, Jan. 14, the House amicably agreed to limit talk to two days on a new internationally-agreed system for detecting and dealing with imports dumped into Canada at cut-rate prices.

Herb Gray, piloting the anti-dumping legislation through the Commons as parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister Edgar Benson, promised the new system will permit quick and effective action when dumping causes or threatens injury to Canadian producers.

While MPs on all sides of the House welcomed the prospect, they raised a number of doubts about just how fast and effectively this would be done.

Key feature of the new system, to come into force by international agreement Jan. 1, is a five-member tribunal to assess within three months the danger or extent of injury as a prelude to imposing special duties on damaging imports.

Until now, such duties have been levied on the general test of whether the imports were brought in at prices below those charged in the country of origin.

"If the dumped goods cause injury, threat of injury or material retardation to production in Canada, dumping duties will be applied," Mr. Gray said.

LESS HOPEFUL

The new system provides "a comprehensive framework within which action can be taken swiftly to counteract dumping."

Opposition members were less hopeful.

"Dumping . . . can, does and will continue to cause serious injury to Canadian industry," said Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary Centre).

The harm will be done before it is detected, and the effectiveness of the new system will depend almost entirely on how well it is administered by public servants being given wide power to act quickly.

Mr. Harkness, a former agriculture minister, expressed the hope that quicker action also will be taken against low-priced fruits and vegetables imported just as the Canadian producers

PARIS (AP) — The South Vietnamese government proposed—and then withdrew—a plan that would bar the Viet Cong from displaying its flag at the Vietnam peace talks, Saigon sources said today.

The change-of-mind came at the urging of the United States delegation of the theory North Vietnam would reject the plan. The flag issue remains in dispute between the U.S. and North Vietnam.

Price Curb Agency Planned

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says the federal government plans to propose a new agency to encourage restraint in prices and wages.

In an Ottawa story, the newspaper says the proposal will be contained in a white paper to be tabled in the Commons Friday on prices and incomes. It says the white paper will be a major government policy statement.

Ron Basford, consumer affairs minister, and his department officials have been consulting leaders in various sections of the economy in the last few months, the story says.

The Star says Mr. Basford's main recommendation will be creation of an independent agency to examine wage and price trends and advise the government on what action it might take.

Fireworks Blow Up

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI)—A firecracker factory exploded in the Rio suburb of Belfort Roxe Tuesday, killing five children turning out fireworks for Christmas celebrations.

Prison Guards Join Work-to-Rule Move

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prison guards and social workers have joined lower mainland Liquor Control Board employees in a work-to-rule campaign.

The Oakalla branch of the British Columbia Government Employees Association started their work-to-rule Tuesday.

Sandy McEwen, president of the 375-member Oakalla branch said his membership "approved the measure and it went into effect on an individual basis.

"Its effectiveness will depend on each individual," he said.

Liquor Control Board employees began a work-to-rule campaign Monday in 22 liquor stores.

Government workers at Riverview Mental Hospital have also voted in favor of working to rule but have not yet started their campaign.

The provincial government employees are seeking full collective bargaining rights. They also seek higher wages providing comparable rates with private industry.

A work-to-rule campaign by the Civic Inside Workers union began today in the Vancouver social service department.

Max Pierotti, the union's business manager, said the campaign was to attempt to force the employment of 10 more social workers and the improvement of working conditions.

The work-to-rule will mainly involve refusal to work overtime.

The union represents 80 of the 100-man department, the remaining 20 being provincial government employees, who have also agreed to work to rule.

CEASEFIRE SET FOR CHRISTMAS

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese government said today it is ready to discuss a "truce arrangement" with North Vietnam for New Year's Day, Jan. 1, and also for Tet, the Vietnamese lunar new year celebration that begins Feb. 17.

President Nguyen Van Thieu already has announced a 24-hour ceasefire for Christmas, beginning at 6 p.m. Dec. 24.

The Viet Cong's National Liberation Front had announced earlier it would observe three-day truces for Christmas, New Year's and Tet.

... was expected either to ignore the invitation or tell the Saigon regime to talk to the National Liberation Front, in line with the Communist contention that the Viet Cong and not the North Vietnamese are fighting the war in South Vietnam.

This would bring the question of further holiday ceasefires back to its present status, since Saigon refuses to recognize the NLF and to negotiate with it.

'The Jolly Old Elf Has Become a Pest'

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — "Dear Santa, drop dead!" says a Methodist minister who thinks the jolly symbol of Christmas is getting too much publicity.

"Santa's omnipresence from before Thanksgiving has gone beyond the bounds of even mythic decency," Dr. John H. McCombe Jr., dean of the Hendricks Chapel at Syracuse University, said in his Christmas sermon.

Santa Claus, Dr. McCombe said, "is a ho-ho phoney whose jingle is the bell of a cash register," and, because of him, "many people are ready to overhaul their observance of this mid-winter bash."

"Overexposure, I gues you'd call it," the minister said. "His picture is everywhere—literally. Stores, shops, billboards, churches—even a funeral parlor. How much is too much?"

Dr. McCombe, a past executive secretary of the American Bible Society, said members of his own family had reassessed its own Christmas-time practices and found that they "felt miles away from the main event at the manger."

"The jolly old elf has become a pest," he said, "as have his legions of 'helpers' in red baggy pants with their banging, begging bells."

So last year, "we stripped Christmas down to its faith, streamlined its festivities and kept Santa in his place.

"Instead of a quarterback sneak into the living room and a mad scramble to intercept packages, we went into a prearranged huddle in the dining room that included prayers, carols and the reading of the Christmas story from the Bible."

It was, Dr. McCombe said, "the best holiday ever."

CHILDREN OF ASIA

Receipt Shows the True Spirit of Christmas

By SUSAN RILEY

Item in Tuesday's list of donations to the Times' Children of Asia Fund:

Stockingstuffers $6

The item was different enough to warrant tracing back to the anonymous donor, a city businessman, for an explanaton.

And the explanation, in turn, was intriguing enough to share with Times readers.

"We don't exactly go overboard with Christmas gifts for our youngsters," the businessman said today. "But they still end up with a generous enough allotment if they things — to the point where I sometimes wonder if they realize how fortunate they are compared with children their ages in the underdeveloped areas of the world, and particularly in Asia.

"I wonder, too," he continued, "if our children don't get the idea of Christmas backwards; the accent is on getting, rather than giving.

"So this year in their Christmas stockings, in place of some of the frivolous items they usually get, they'll find an envelope with a receipt from the Children of Asia Fund and a brief note explaining that at a time when they are generously looked after with gifts they should spare a few moments to think of the plight of others who are not so fortunate as themselves."

So there it is. A simple enough little idea but one which, if multiplied by the thousands of Victoria children who will be surfeited with gifts on Christmas day, could bring the gift of life to many Indian or Korean children in the year ahead.

The Unitarian Service Committee despartely needs every dollar it can get to meet its commitment to the children it has undertaken to feed. A dollar or so given on behalf of a well-fed, well-clothed Canadian child can literally mean that some Asian child will be spared the terror of starvation for several days.

SECOND GANG SUCCESSFUL

LONDON (Reuters) — Thieves made a £104,000 (about $270,400) raid on a Pan American Airways cargo shed at London's Heathrow Airport today while police—acting on a tip—ambushed a second gang in another part of the airport.

The successful raiders escaped with diamonds, gold dust and dollars from Pan Am strong rooms.

Meanwhile, Scotland Yard detectives captured three men after a fight near the strong-room of British European Airways. They sent 16 men there after a tip that thieves were planning to rob it of bullion and gems worth up to £500,000 ($1,300,000).

Police captured the men in a BEA truck and recovered a loaded pistol, masks, rope and forged papers.

Later the three appeared in court at nearby Uxbridge and were ordered held without bail on charges of conspiracy to rob.

Security men had checked the Pan Am shed at midnight and found nothing unusual. The robbers got into it by forcing one door and opening two others with duplicate keys, police reported.

They escaped with $75,000 U.S. in cash, nine packets of diamonds and a packet of gold dust.

Police said the diamonds were privately owned and were on their way to Japan. The cash was in transit from Malaysia to New York. The gold dust was believed bound for the Far East.

Tax Rental Pact Works Well, Says Bennett

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

Premier Bennett Tuesday indicated he will march to the Thursday federal-provincial fiscal conference in his usual cadence—out of step with the others.

But this time Ottawa may be happy to see him refusing to join the crowd.

Mr. Bennett refused to show any support for vehement denunciations hurled at the federal government in pre-conference statements by Ontario's and Manitoba's finance ministers.

He said he would persist in his usual stance that a new deal is needed but he's going to this meeting more to listen than to talk.

"I'm a great co-operative federalist," he told reporters when asked for comment on the Ontario and Manitoba complaints.

"I make my statements in our briefs or afterwards, naturally, if I'm asked."

Mr. Bennett disagreed with Ontario's indication that it would institute its own provincial income tax system unless Ottawa gives it a much larger share than the present 24 per cent going to the provinces under the tax rental agreements.

He said the tax rental agreements were "working well" and although he will ask for more than 24 per cent for B.C. there will be no threat of establishing a separate income tax system here.

"We will ask for a larger percentage of the take without double taxation of our citizens," he said.

Asked how much more he would seek, Mr. Bennett said "I'll say that at the conference, but in any case we're not making any statement like Ontario's."

He also tore into the Manitoba demand that the federal government take over the whole medicare program in Canada instead of sharing only 50 per cent for five years.

"The federal government can't agree to a demand like that because it's an Act of Parliament — only Parliament can make that kind of change."

PROTECT UNITY

Asked if he was going to Ottawa to help defend the federal government from provincial demands for more of its resources and powers, Mr. Bennett laughed and said:

"I'm going down to protect Canadian unity.

"Our brief (constitutional brief released unilaterally by B.C. Friday) shows that we're out to protect the whole total — not just the English and the French.

"That's the No. 1 point in the brief and all the papers missed it," he said.

Mr. Bennett said he was fighting Ottawa's attempt "to set up two racial groups above the others" in a manner that would make all other ethnic minorities second-class citizens.

"I say no to that and I say never, as far as British Columbia is concerned."

He added that support from citizens is continuing to pour in from across the country but he continued to refuse to indicate the number of communications he's received since releasing the brief.

'Secret Talks Should Follow Peace Parley'

NEW YORK (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger, special foreign policy adviser to President-elect Nixon, has said that four-sided peace talks in Paris should serve as a prelude to informal and perhaps even secret talks between Hanoi and the United States and between Saigon and the Viet Cong.

In an article written before becoming a Nixon aide, Kissinger said there also should be a third forum—an international conference to work out guarantees and safeguards for agreements arrived at in the other talks.

Kissinger, a Harvard University scholar, set forth his views on the Vietnam negotiations in an article in the quarterly Foreign Affairs. At his appointment Dec. 2, he declined to discuss specific foreign policy matters, saying that as a presidential adviser his views should not be voiced in public.

The United States, Kissinger argued in the article, should concentrate in the negotiations on the mutual withdrawal of external forces and avoid negotiating about the internal political structure of South Vietnam.

This should be left to direct negotiations among the South Vietnamese, he said.

If the United States becomes entangled in such subjects as a coalition government, Kissinger said, it will be the one party least sensitive to the subtleties of Vietnamese politics and would be likely to end up applying most of its pressure on Saigon.

"The result," he said, "may be the complete demoralization of Saigon, profound domestic tensions within the United States and a prolonged stalemate or a resumption of the war."

American objectives in the negotiations, Kissinger said, should be to bring about a staged withdrawal of North Vietnamese and American forces and to create a maximum incentive for the contending forces in South Vietnam to work out a political settlement.

Kissinger said a coalition government is undesirable, but stated: "A mixed commission to develop and supervise a political process to reintegrate the country—including free elections—could be useful. And there must be an international presence to enforce good faith."

An international force also would be required to supervise access routes, Kissinger said, for no one should be expected to rely on Hanoi's word on troop withdrawal.

Kissinger also said this international force should be reinforced by "an electronic barrier" to check movements. He did not elaborate on this suggestion, but it echoed former defence secretary Robert McNamara's idea for an electronic barrier in the demilitarized zone.

Bennet's Dates Okay

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday he has proposed to the premiers new dates for the postponed federal-provincial constitutional conference to accommodate B.C.'s Premier Bennett.

The new dates still fall in the first two weeks of February.

Trudeau said his original proposal for early February was a disadvantage to B.C. His new proposal better suited Bennett and he had suggested it to the other premiers. Not all had replied yet.

The conference was scheduled this week but was postponed at Quebec's request because of the illness of Premier Bertrand.

Further Delay Feared

PARIS (AP) — The Saigon government's peace negotiators were reported today to have made another proposal that the Communists are sure to reject, raising the prospect of more delay in the start of the Vietnam peace talks even if the delegations ever agree on the shape of the conference table.

Diplomatic informants said Pham Dang Lam, the nominal leader of the South Vietnamese delegation, had proposed to the U.S. delegation that only the United States and North and South Vietnam be allowed to display their flags and nameplates at the enlarged peace talks.

The proposal would deny these sovereignty symbols to the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front, the fourth delegation that is to be at the talks, on the ground that it is not a government.

Since Hanoi and the NLF contend that the Front is the only legitimate representative of the South Vietnamese people and that the Saigon government is an American puppet representing no one, the Communists are certain to insist on full status for the NLF just as they have in the dispute over the shape of the conference table.

The informants said the Americans have not submitted Saigon's flag-nameplate proposal to the North Vietnamese in the private meetings that the men from Hanoi and Washington hold to discuss conference procedure. The American negotiators warned Lam that Hanoi might offer to meet without any flags or nameplates, a move which could be dressed up as a major concession although in fact, it conceded nothing of significance.

120 H-Bombs In Arsenal Of China?

NEW DELHI (AP) — China may have a stockpile of 120 nuclear bombs, Defence Minister Swaran Hingh told Parliament today.

Singh added that according to information available to the Indian government, China is capable of producing about 40 nuclear bombs a year with a 20-kiloton capacity and is developing ballistic missiles with a 2,000-mile range.

He said the Chinese had deployed 13 to 16 divisions along India's northern borders. But he declined — "in the public interest" — to disclose details of the Chinese equipment or air bases, or whether there are any Chinese missile bases along the 2,000-mile frontier.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, DEC. 18, 1968—PAGE 15

Our suburbs twinkle, and this happy fact marks a new approach to Christmas decorating. There was a time when few Victorians other than those entered in outdoor lighting contests strung bright globes in December. But the practice is becoming general, and it's a rare block that doesn't offer at least one spangle of color to glow against the dark.

It used to be that houseeaves and evergreens were considered the only appropriate backgrounds for lighting.

Now, some of the most eye-catching effects are produced by a free-style application of lights to the stark limbs of deciduous trees.

Watch for these on your evening rounds. They're purely lovely.

Our lighting performance — which never manages to catch up with our ambitions — hasn't extended that far, but this year we have taken the idea indoors.

We searched out a Japanese maple bough with numerous forks, trimmed to to length, and mounted it on a wooden base.

Then we clipped miniature lights — 35 of them — to its twigs, and set the assembly where no passerby would become entangled in it.

We're pleased with it, but a world of caution about those needle-nosed miniature globes. They're delicate and finicky. Make sure you test them before purchase.

When busy Peter Bunn and I meet, it is usually in the supermart where our wives do their shopping. There, while the grocery carts come and go, we have discussed and occasionally argued about a public school system which stands in this man's debt.

He will serve it still, but as a trustee rather than as the sturdily outspoken chairman of Greater Victoria school board. I'm sorry that he's stepping down, and engaged his ear long enough on Tuesday to tell him so.

"It's a tremendous sort of job for a small working boy to do," said Peter Bunn, a general contractor by trade.

This year, he told me, education functions of one sort or another have intruded into 190 of his days. In one month, school board work took him off the job or out on an evening 22 times.

"But it isn't just that I think my family and my work shoud see more of me," he said. "I think the board might benefit from a change of pace, and perhaps a year or two of the softer approach."

At Monday night's board meeting, Peter Bunn had spoken with considerable feeling about the annual haggle over teachers' salaries. But this recurring tussle, he insisted, isn't his reason for abandoning the chairmanship he has held for over two years.

His message to parents: "There's an enormous need for teaching — survival depends on education."

And his warning to teachers: "You can't talk of professionalism while going in to bargain like the IWA."

For reasons thay you will understand, I didn't mention the fact that two Canada geese had taken up winter residence on University of Victoria campus.

Through several weeks, they stayed close together, a pair of grand grey and black migrants near the edge of the rain-drenched soccer field.

They became a familiar sight to students and others using the ring road. We got used to seeing them there, apparently feeding on the green grass, and entirely unconcerned by the flow of traffic.

Nobody interfered with them until last Sunday. Then, as a Monday news story revealed, two men got out of a car, believed to carry Illinois licence plates, and blasted them with shotguns.

To all appearances, the birds were a goose and a gander that had dropped out of their southward flight, perhaps because of an injury to one or the other. Mated, the big Canadas are loyal until death.

A sad end to a pair of noble waterfowl who found sanctuary in our city. May their flesh stick in the "hunters' " throats!

GERRY AND ISABEL JOHNSON
. . . journey of hope

Royston Man Leaves For Houston Jan. 2 To Get New Heart

By MORGAN MacGREGOR

Confirmation was received at St. Joseph's Hospital in Comox Tuesday that 43-year-old Gerry Johnson of Royston will leave for Texas Jan 2 to get a new heart.

Dr. Marcos Villaneuva received a call from heart surgeon Denton A. Cooley of St. Luke's Hospital in Houston saying the transplant will proceed as soon after that date as a donated heart is available.

Mr. Johnson, father of two, remains in hospital at Comox where he will be built up for the operation.

Johnson, who was a boom foreman with Crown Zellerbach Ltd., has been on half salary with the company ever since he became bed-ridden two years ago.

WIFE GOING

He and his wife Isabel said they still have no idea what the operation will cost, but contributions from his company and from fellow employees have now made it possible for Mrs. Johnson to accompany her husband to Texas.

This will enable her to remain there in a hotel until he is well enough to return home.

The Comox District Free Press received numerous calls Tuesday asking where contributions could be made.

Phillip Bickle, son of the publisher, set up a trust account at the Imperial Bank of Commerce late Tuesday afternoon.

Tonight Kinsmen will hold a bingo with all proceeds going to the Johnson fund.

This will be the first major trip for the Johnsons out of Canada except for a short visit to Cleveland, Ohio, two years ago where an artery transplant had been planned but was cancelled.

Mrs. Johnson said B.C. Hospital Insurance Service coverage will assist to the extent of what it would pay in B.C. hospitals, which is only a fraction of the costs in most U.S. hospitals.

'TERRIFIC COST'

"The cost is apparently terrific," said Mrs. Johnson, "but in the rush to make preparations we never had a chance to find out exactly what it will cost."

She believes Medical Services Association, the company medical insurance carrier, will also assume part of the costs.

Dr. Villaneuva, the Johnson's family doctor at Courtenay, who came from the Philippines four years ago, made all arrangements with Dr. Cooley after applying by letter.

He was unavailable for comment, but Mrs. Johnson said she believed the doctor had applied to Dr. Cooley because of the high percentage of successful transplants undertaken at the Houston hospital by the Cooley team.

It was thought that Mr. Johnson's condition was such that he would respond well to a new heart and no other course of treatment was open to him.

Alderman Against More Crystal Debate

A bid to re-open debate on the future of the Crystal Garden is expected to get a cool reception from city council Thursday.

Thomas Christie, due to be sworn in as alderman in January, has requested that no further decisions on the Crystal be made until he takes his place on council.

In a letter to city clerk Morran Waller he asks that "in view of the controversy regarding the whole matter at the time of the municipal elections, and my stand during the campaign" the matter should be tabled until the first council meeting of 1969.

OPPOSES DELAY

Mr. Christie was referring specifically to a Monday decision that the Royal London Wax Museum be given two years' notice to vacate its Crystal Garden premises.

Ald. Percy Frampton, chairman of the city's recreation and community services committee, indicated today that he would oppose any move to delay action.

"It seems kind of foolish to me to be beating the bushes on an issue which was decided after debate so long ago," he said.

The decision to phase out the Crystal as a swimming pool and to demolish it after a new pool was built was made on March 8 this year by the recreation and community services committee.

The committee decision was ratified by full council on March 14.

Both decisions were made after months of study and debate in committee sessions.

CAREFUL STUDY

In presenting his recommendations to committee and council Ald. Frampton said careful study had been given to reports which indicated that the Crystal could be saved.

On report stated that a complete overhaul would cost $568,950.

Subsequent discussions revealed that the total price to renovate the Crystal completely would be approximately $750,000.

Planning Group Asks $100,000

A provisional budget of almost $100,000 was presented Tuesday to the Capital Region Planning Board.

This compares with the 1968 budget of $94,135. The final budget for 1969 will come in the new year.

The provisional budget shows that three-quarters of expenditures are for staff salaries. Next highest expenditure is $7,400, for rent of the office at Bastion Square.

HE HAD ALL OUR NUMBERS

By PETE LOUDON

Yes, Victoria, there is a Father Hendricks.

He is alive and well in Kipalapala, near Tabor, Tanzania, East Africa.

The Times talked to him there at 2:30 a.m. today.

He used a Victoria telephone book to obtain addresses of 58,500 Victorians to whom he recently sent appeals for funds.

The phone book had been sent to him by a sympathetic Victoria correspondent Henry Walboomers, a city department store worker.

Father Nico Hendriks said also that he is aware an official of the Catholic Church here, Monsignor Michael T. O'Connell had cabled church authorities in East Africa seeking information on the fund appeal.

Official Approval

"The archbishop here has answered that it is okay," Father Nico shouted over the noisy and wavering phone network. He said his Tanganyika Mission Press is a project operated with the blessing of the Bishop of Tanganyika.

He said of his campaign to raise funds for additional machiners for publishing school books and periodicals, "I wish we will have success" in the Victoria drive.

The local campaign has been subject to constant questioning by the public since the letters arrived here last week. "Dozens and dozens" of calls were made to Better Business Bureau.

Radio hot line programs discussed whether the drive was authentic or a racket and no one knew whether or not the mission press was operated as a non-profit business, as Father Hendrik claims.

Nothing Sinister

Mr. Walboomers told the Times today he had wished to remain anonymous but reports that he could not be identified had given a sinister ring to his connection to the drive.

He said he had corresponded with Father Hendrik for several years after first learning of his work in Tanzania native education on a radio program.

The idea of a Victoria campaign was evolved by Mr. Walboomers and Father Hendriks after the priest learned of the size of Victoria and the generosity of Canadians.

'Nice Size'

"Vancouver, Toronto or Montreal would have been too big. Places of the size of Sidney would have been too small. Victoria seemed to be a nice size," said Mr. Walboomers.

Monsignor O'Connell, rector of St. Andrew's Cathedral here, said a cable arrived Tuesday night from Archbishop Marcus Mihayo of Tabora.

It said that the heirarchy of bishops of Tanzania is generally behind the TMP and gives approval to the Christmas appeal made to Victoria.

"There's no doubt it's a worthy cause," said Mons. O'Connell and he urged its support.

The Times began attempts to contact Father Hendriks last Saturday. One obstacle was a 10-hour time difference which meant calls made by day from Victoria were unanswered in the mission office.

Calls which were advanced through Montreal and London overseas operators by night Saturday, Sunday and Monday were frustrated by a series of line interruptions involving downed wires and telephones "out of order."

THEY LIKE THE WHEELS

Supermarts Lose 50 Carts Weekly

By GEORGE COCHRANE

Husbands wanting barbecue grills, wives needing laundry carriers, children building soap-box racers.

They all mean headaches for supermarket managers.

Because they all have their eyes on his shopping carts.

The thieves are seeking mostly the wheels and the rear stainless steel grill.

Stores in Greater Victoria report losing up to 50 carts weekly. Most are found by store employees within blocks while others are brought in from points as far as five miles away. But others seem to vanish completely.

From two to 30 carts are written off annually by individual stores at an average cost of $50 each.

Police on their rounds and repairman servicing private houses often provide a tip-off as to where the buggies have ended up. People have been known to wheel a cart home and then phone the shop to say they have "found" it.

So far there is no law making it illegal to leave store premises with a shopping cart. Stores are entitled to prosecute offenders for theft but shy away from the publicity involved.

Sleep Gun To Control Roaming Dogs

North Saanich has decided to buy a tranquilizer rifle to bring down dogs running at large.

The decision was reached after council ruled a crackdown on unleashed dogs was overdue. But so far no one knows where to get the sleep gun.

Municipal clerk Michael Allen said today he has asked Sidney RCMP for informaton.

"We've got a big problem with marauding dogs in this area," said Mr. Allen. "Council has instructed the dog-catcher to take court action against dog owners who do not abide by the bylaw."

He said North Saanich had but only 209 owners had taken a dog population of over 1,000 out licences last year.

Licence fees are $4 for a male and spayed female.

Pet Law Approval Monday

It took nearly two years.

But finally the new animals bylaw in Saanich is within a week of approval.

Final reading of the 22-page document is expected at a special meeting Monday night.

The first change most Saanich residents will notice will be increased dog licence fees.

The new rate is $5 for male dogs, $5 for spayed females and $15 for unspayed females. Cats continue to be tax-free.

The old licence fee was $4 for male dogs, $4 for spayed females and $6 for unspayed females but there was a reduction of $1 if paid on or before March 31.

If the new bylaw receives final reading this Monday, as expected, Saanich dog owners must get new licences before Feb. 1. The licences are valid for the full calendar year.

LIMITS

Another feature of the bylaw is the introduction, for the first time, of a limitation on the number of cats and dogs which may be kept in a house.

The limit is three dogs over the age of six months. For the fourth and fifth dogs, a permit is necessary. Beyond five dogs will require a commercial kennel licence.

For cats, the limit is five over the age of four months. A permit will be necessary to keep more than five cats.

The decision to revamp the animals bylaw sprang from an old Saanich problem, uncontrolled and roving dogs. Sections of the new bylaw have restrictions on this aspect.

THREE MEETINGS

A draft bylaw was circulated in February, 1967, and three full scale public meetings were held during the year.

Since then the bylaw has been considered at a number of meetings of lands and planning committee, and at council, and was put into official form by municipal officials including solicitor D. A. M. Patterson.

Council voted its approval May 6 and sent the tentative bylaw to Mr. Patterson for formal drafting.

The bylaw's progress was steered by municipal planner Tom Loney, who took charge following the death of the chief inspector of services, David Smith.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you give me some information on the following: 1. How are jurors picked, that is, from where are the names chosen? 2. If a person serves on one case, are they eligible to serve on any following cases? 3. Is there any law for the employer to make up the difference in pay?—C. C.

A. 1. From the voters list; 2. Yes. It is up to the lawyers involved in selecting the jury; 3. No, although most employers do so.

Q. Where did the term funky originate and what does it mean?

A. Funky is defined in the Dictionary of Slang as meaning afraid, timid, very nervous. It started as a colloquial expression about 1837 when a poet wrote "The remaining Barkingtonians were less funky and made some fair scores."

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Malahat Strip To Be Studied By Specialists

Safety Body Acts After Eighth Death

A study of how accidents can be prevented on the Malahat has been launched by the Greater Victoria and District Traffic Safety Council.

Eight lives have been lost on the treacherous stretch of the Trans-Canada Highway this year.

The council's general manager, Dennis Wagner, and assistant, John Reeves, will present a preliminary report to the council's executive by Feb. 4, it was decided Tuesday.

Their study will include highways in the Colwood-Langford-Sooke district as well, Mr. Wagner said.

Recommendations will be made under the headings enforcement, education and engineering.

Mr. Wagner said specialists in each area will be called upon to advised the study group.

Special attention will be paid reports of accidents that have occurred to see if patterns emerge.

Of the Malahat deaths this year, at least three occurred while people were travelling to work.

Safety Push Requested In Schools

A brief on driving safety was presented to the provincial government Tuesday by B.C. members of the All Canada Youth Council.

Led by University of B.C. student Marillia Neto, the delegation presented a brief to Attorney-General Leslie Peterson containing recommendations passed last summer at the All-Canada conference of young drivers in Montreal.

The brief recommended the provincial education department implement a full safety education program in schools, including universal driver education programs.

It also suggested that driving licences be probationary and that the new drivers be subject to re-examination after one year.

On law enforcement, the brief said defendants in traffic cases should appear personally in court and that devices designed to warn motorists of radar be prohibited by law.

28 More Nabbed For Careless Walking Habits

Another 28 Victorians were to be summonsed after failing to obey "Don't Walk" signs downtown Tuesday.

Police said the switch from warnings to fines ($2.50) is bringing noticeable results in safer pedestrian habits.

Greater Victoria and District Safety Council, noting that Defensive Walking Week is now half over, is optimistic the street accident rate will be reduced between now and Christmas.

But the council points out celebrating pedestrians are a growing problem.

"We hear much these days regarding impaired drivers .... but don't overlook that the impaired pedestrian also is guilty of unpredictable traffic behavior. He can and does cause accidents."

The council stopped short of sloganizing, "If you drink, don't walk" . . . but the council says death and injury statistics each year underline the perils.

DEATH ROCK WENT 440 FEET THROUGH OPENING IN TREES

No blame can be attached to anyone in the rock blasting death of Lars Oke Linell last Thursday near Sooke, Coroner Eugene Murphy has ruled.

"It was entirely accidental. He took what should have been sufficient precautions," said the coroner following an enquiry.

He said Mr. Linell, 59, was struck by a huge rock while assuming a station to halt approaching traffic on Muir Creek Road.

The rock travelled 440 feet over a hill. Mr. Linell had stationed his truck in a place of shelter behind a treed bluff.

By a freak occurrence the rock travelled through a three-to-four-foot opening between the trees, smashing through the truck's windshield before striking the driver.

Subdivision, Park Among Proposals For Indian Lands

By ROGER STONEBANKS

A leasehold subdivision of 90 acres on prime waterfront in a North Saanich Indian reserve is envisioned in a planning report made public Tuesday.

Prepared by the Capital Region Planning Board at the request of the Pauquachin band at Coles Bay, west of John Dean Park, and flanking West Saanich Road, the report seeks to show present and future land use requirements as they relate to the human development of the Pauquachins.

The leasehold subdivision for white persons is one of a number of land uses mentioned in the report. Others include a 125-acre regional park, improved education program, community centre, tourist trailer and camping site and riding academy as well as an area for band housing.

The Pauquachin reserve has an area of 700 acres and a population of only 130.

The proposed leasehold area — where the resident would own the house but lease the land underneath from the owners, the Indians — would be off West Saanich Road.

The report said the area is well suited for single-family houses.

Main attractions would be the waterfront area and proximity to the proposed regional park.

It was anticipated the leasehold subdivision could start in five years, expecially because waterfront lots are next to impossible to obtain in the region.

What lies behind the report, with its proposal for the waterfront leasehold subdivision, is the fact that Indians are poor but their land is rich.

"All band leaders are striving and looking for social equality," Pauquachin chief Don Williams told the planning board.

● ● ●

"The only way we can get financial support is to capitalize on our land holdings."

Board chairman Gordon Lee replied, "We agree with you. It's a very progressive step."

After the meeting, Chief Williams said leasehold housing has already occurred at the Musqueam reserve in Vancouver.

"We need capital to provide good homes for our Indians. We can do this by leasehold," he said.

He pointed out, however, that at present there is no sewer and no water system for leasehold houses and there would be no move until Indians see the revised federal Indian Act.

A future residential area mentioned in the report in 25 or 30 years would cover 300 acres east of the West Saanich Road.

Estimated income from proposals in the report, including leasehold housing, would start at $20,750 next year rising to $70,300 in 1978.

The leasehold plan would generate $7,000 in 1972 rising to $26,000 in 1978.

The poverty of Indians and the wealth of their land was highlighted by Tony Roberts, director of the Capital Region Planning Board.

Of the 190,000 residents on southern Vancouver Island, 1,100 live on reserves.

"These people live in some of the worst housing, have the lowest levels of health and education and the highest rate of unemployment of any citizen group," he said.

● ● ●

"Yet, paradoxically, the Indian people in the eight bands in this region can also be counted among our richer citizens.

"Their land consists of 4,000 acres of the most desirable real estate including large tracts of waterfront property. At a conservative estimate this land is worth $11 million, or $10,000 for each man, woman and child.

"These two contradictory facts of social privation and wealth of resources point the way to the two fundamental steps required to achieve real progress in the Indian communities.

"The first is to plan and develop land so that its potential can be converted into cash.

"The second step is the preparation and carrying out of a program to commit these earnings for social and economic improvement.

"The terms of reference of this report are to provide a plan for the realization of step number one for the Pauqhachin community of 130 persons. Step number two, which incidentally is more difficult than step number one, must follow."

One startling fact which illustrates the poverty of Indians is given in the report.

Quoting from a 1966 survey of Indians in Canada, the report says the average per capita income in Canada was $1,400.

But the per capita income of an Indian person was about $300.

● ● ●

"The main causes are employment in low-paid industries and occupations along with many persons underemployed," the report said.

"The number of persons unemployed for all the Indian communities in the region is approximately 23 per cent compared with 4 per cent for those persons registered at the Victoria Manpower Centre.

"Another factor in low per capita income figures is the large proportion of the Indian population below working age. For example, in June, 1966, 55 per cent of the Indian persons in the region were under 19 years of age compared with 35 per cent in the general population.

"The effective work force (those persons actually living in the Indian community at any one time and not those persons living away from it of the total Indian population is 17 per cent compared to the region's work force of 36 per cent.

Tense Racial Situation In Halifax Area Defused

HALIFAX (CP) — A tense racial situation that threatened to erupt into major trouble earlier this month appears to have been de-fused by wholesale government concessions and efforts by the Nova Scotia Negro community to find a consensus.

The appearance of a handful of militant Black Panthers here late in November raised fears of racial strife. The situation did not get so bad largely because of the unexpected type of discrimination they encountered here, according to a Negro spokesman.

"Black Panthers who came here told me they felt misled about conditions here. . . . Someone fed them poor information. . . . They were told conditions were terrible," says Rev. Wrenfred Bryant, past moderator of the African United Baptist Association of Nova Scotia.

This was borne out by T. D. Pawley of Boston, a Black Panther, who told reporters he found subtle but not open discrimination and tension in the Halifax-Dartmouth area, home for almost half of Nova Scotia's 15,000 Negroes.

His organization stood ready to help blacks here to fight for equal opportunity but it was up to the black community to decide what assistance it wanted.

PREPARED REPORT

He and an aide held meetings with Negro leaders and said they prepared a report for Stokeley Carmichael's visit here earlier following a black writers' conference in Montreal.

A human rights conference which followed is regarded by many as having come just in time to avert a confrontation between blacks and whites.

Premier G. I. Smith pledged at the conference that his province would set an example in human rights legislation and then proceeded to outline immediate changes contemplated by his government.

These included increases in fines for discrimination levied under the Human Rights Act; public inquiries following complaints of discrimination to be made mandatory and complaints and inquiries published; charitable, philanthropic, educational and social organizations to be brought under the act; the Human Rights Act to be enforced by local agents in provincial centres and the act to apply to all housing of more than one self-contained unit.

He also promised a determined effort to meet Negro demands for better education and housing, more jobs and assistance to young people with talent.

NAMES WHITE MAN

His announcement of a director for the provincial human rights commission, a long-awaited appointment, however, created an uproar when it became known he was a white man.

Marvin Schiff, 31, of Toronto was the target of the outcry by Negroes who had expected a black man to receive the appointment.

Mr. Schiff said he would make "damned sure" that things he wanted to happen for minority groups in the province did happen "or else I resign."

"The conference was successful in that the premier agreed to accept our demands . . . but it showed the lack of a black consensus," said Dr. William P. Oliver, member of the provincial adult education staff and a former Baptist minister.

"You can't legislate goodwill, attitudes. . . . The problem is beyond legislation. . . . We have people who have to find themselves."

FORM UNITED FRONT

To try to achieve a consensus among the scattered Negro settlements in Nova Scotia an all-black meeting here in November formed a Black United Front as a "co-ordinating and catalytic body."

Dr. Oliver is chairman.

With the BUF scarcely off the ground, its aims and objectives still vague, it has already come under criticism from an older, more established Negro organization for its alleged tendency to think of achieving objectives immediately.

Ross Kinney, a layman, moderator of the African United Baptist Association which purports to speak for more than 90 per cent of Nova Scotia's Negroes, disassociated the AUBA from the front.

He is supported by Mr. Bryant, who disagrees with the structure of the BUF and thinks "there is a top echelon Halifax City group" while the problems are province-wide.

He fears that eventually the Nova Scotia Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the AUBA may become subservient to the "super committee."

Dr. Oliver feels the BUF can contribute to "a transition from the slave-master complex."

'Individual MPs Become Powerless'

TORONTO (CP) —A Liberal member of Parliament predicts individual MPs will become practically powerless once Prime Minister Trudeau's system of government-appointed regional advisers becomes effective.

Steven Otto, member for York East, said that when the 150 advisers begin reporting to "the all-powerful regional desks" in Mr. Trudeau's office it will be "like a giant Gatling gun."

Speaking to a local riding association Monday night, Mr. Otto said that once the system takes effect "I won't bother running, nor will others like me."

Mr. Trudeau announced the plan for regional desks and their advisers across the country in July. The advisers' jobs will be to relay local ideas to regional desks in Ottawa.

SEEK PUBLIC OIPNION

Mr. Trudeau has said they were designed to provide a "new sensitivity" to public feeling and needs across the country when shaping government policy.

The advisers poll opinion and check with key business, labor, farm and other people for reaction to government programs under consideration.

"Regional desks will be all-powerful," said Mr. Otto, adding that Mr. Trudeau "has fantastic support from the public and he's convinced he can keep it."

Mr. Otto said that under the new Trudeau system, MPs would have a new role and would come, not from the country at large, but from large establishment families.

"They'll go right into the House of Commons from college. It will be a career."

FISH EGG PLUNDER PROTESTED

DUNCAN—Catching fish just to obtain the eggs for bait is causing increasing concern to conservationists, Vancouver Island wildlife federation president Arnie Williams says.

Mr. Williams said the federation is not worried about the average fisherman who takes the legal limit but against people who make repeated trips just to get fish eggs.

Eggs are obtainable from canneries where it is considered waste material, he said.

Cowichan Fish and Game Association decided a province-wide resolution will be sought to take steps to protect eggs except where sold correctly labelled and weighed in commercial outlets.

Parole Board Delay Draws Sharp Rebuke

VANCOUVER (CP) — Coroner Glen McDonald of Vancouver criticized the National Parole Board Tuesday for failing to reply to a request for parole from a prisoner known to have fatal cancer until after the man had died.

The coroner made the criticism after an inquest into the death Dec. 12 of Amelio Joseph Albertini, 55.

The inquest was told parole board took nearly two months to make a reply to Albertini's request for clemency. The reply was a refusal.

"In this day of instant communicaions, the board should have given its decision before he (Albertini) died of cancer," said Mr. McDonald.

"But, ironically, their refusal came three days after he had died of cancer — the very reason he had made the request for parole."

Raymond Wilson, superintendent of Mountain Prison in Agassiz, where Albertini was an inmate from March 18 until May 17, said the prisoner had one son in Victoria.

Young Voyageur Program Set For Next Year

DUNCAN — The Young Voyageur program, under which a group of students from out of the province exchanges visits with 12 local students, will be continued, Cowichan school board decided Monday night.

The 12 students from this district will join a similar group from the lower Island and, with two adult escorts, travel to some eastern city.

The seven-day visists take place during July and August. All travel expenses to and from main centres are paid for by the federal government and in addition some financial assistance will be provided, such as a $500 grant to the host community for reception expenses.

Divinity Student Wins Case

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Supreme Court has rapped selective service director Lewis B. Hershey for "blatantly lawless" use of the power to reclassify divinity students who protest the war in Vietnam.

But the court also upheld Hershey's basic power to reclassify most registrants free from court scrutiny until the draftee is in the army or goes on trial for refusal to be inducted.

The crucial difference, the court spelled out in two separate cases, is that ministers and divinity students enjoy a draft exemption beyond the reach of Hershey's system unless Congress grants him more power, while most other draft-age men are fully subject by law to rulings by their draft boards.

The rebuke to Hershey, who claimed broad "delinquency" reclassification powers over exempt as well as deferred registrants, came in a 6-to-3 decision in favor of James J. Oistereich, 24, a student at Andover-Newton Theological School near Boston, who received his 1-A notice after he turned in his draft card last year in a war protest.

Santa Uses Workboat, Helicopter

Santa Claus will arive in a helicopter or workboat when he brings toys and goodies to children at the 32 lighthouses dotting the coast between Race Rocks and Cape Scott.

Plying the 550-mile round in the Canadian Coast Guard supply vessel Camsell, Santa either ferries to shore in a workboat or flies in the ship's Bell helicopter as he brightens the Christmas season for children.

Making his third annual Christmas tour, Santa will again become the Camsell's chief steward George Thomas when the trip is over.

Employees of the department of transport's Victoria marine agency provide funds for the presents.

SURROUNDED BY CLOWNS at a CFB Esquimalt Christmas party today, Jennifer gets tickled by two of 80 volunteers who put on the carnival and concert for more than 250 needy or handicapped local children. Dressed in her bright-red outfit, Jennifer, who will be six on Boxing Day, came down with the children from the cerebral palsy clinic school. With her are naval Warrant Officer Doug Kelly of Winnipeg Beach, Man., at left, and Air Force Cpl. Fred Wilson of New Glasgow, N.S. (Times Photo)

Conversation In Jail Cells Told Court

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) —A policeman posing as a prisoner in Saanich jail testified Tuesday that one man charged with non-capital murder accused another suspect of giving a statement to police about the slaying.

John Douglas Archer, a constable on the Saanich police force, said he overheard a conversation between Gary Hugh McWhirter, 24, of Sooke, and Fred Morry, 28, of no fixed address.

McWhirter and Morry are jointly charged with the March 14 non-capital murder of Victoria hotel clerk William Bruce van Munster, 24, whose decomposed body was found in July by police in woods near Victoria.

Const. Archer said he was placed in a cell as a prisoner at noon July 27. Morry was brought in first, and then McWhirter was put in a cell facing Morry.

Const. Archer testified the following conversation took place across the corridor as soon as the police left the cell block:

McWhirter: "Well, are you happy now, Fred?"

Morry: "What do you mean?"

McWhirter: "How do they know so much?"

Morry: "Don't ask me."

McWhirter: "How did they find out about the bar?"

Morry: "What bar?"

McWhirter: "You know what bar."

Morry: "You mean to R.O.?"

McWhirter: "Yes, the R.O."

Morry: "I wasn't in the R.O."

McWhirter: "You know better than that. McNeil sure knew about it. What did you do, give them a signed statement?"

Morry: "If I signed a statement, what am I still doing here?"

McWhirter: "You know me. Don't give me that."

Const. Archer testified that ended the conversation.

Earlier crown evidence before the all-male jury and Mr. Justice Craig Munroe showed that the "R.O." was the Royal Olympic Hotel beer parlor in Victoria where the accused drank, and "McNeil" was James Kenneth McNeil, a convict who in the witness stand testified McWhirter and Morry had beaten and kicked van Munster and that one had hit him with an iron bar.

SERVING TIME

McNeil, serving time in Prince George jail for attempted theft and possession of burglary tools, testified he was with McWhirter and Morry on the night of March 14 when the hotel clerk was slain.

Under cross-examination, McNeil testified that he had drank more than 30 glasses of beer on Mar. 14 from before 11 a.m. until midnight around Victoria beer parlors before leaving with Morry and McWhirter with the intention of breaking into a store. store.

Two gas station attendants, James Milne and Brian Allan, both of Saanich, testified that a car had pulled into their station, on the Trans-Canada Highway near midnight and that they heard someone pleading to be let out of the trunk.

Both witnesses said they took no action because one of two occupants of the auto said it was a stag party joke.

"I wasn't concerned," testified Brian Allan, 20. "I know strange things happen at stag parties."

The trial continues.

Appeal Asks Vote Recount Be Squashed

BURNS LAKE, B.C. (CP) — An appeal was sent to Victoria today to uphold an election night ballot count, rather than a recount that saw a $6,500,000 hopsital district referendum defeated by .2 per cent.

The referendum had been approved by 62.9 per cent, but a recount Monday, ordered by the British Columbia Hospital Insurance Service, showed a 59.8 per cent approval, .2 per cent short of the required 60 per cent.

The recount was ordered after reports of irrgeularities, which included one voter receiving two ballots, and both tenant and resident electors voting when only ratepayers were eligible.

Bill Milligan, Vanderhoof Hospital Administrator, said today an appeal has been sent to Health Minister Ralph Loffmark to uphold the election night count.

The major factor in the 3.1 per cent difference in votes was one 64-vote poll—Decker Lake—which was ruled negative in the recount because a voters' list had not been supplied. It was listed as 32-32 on election night.

The vote had been taken along 200 miles of Highway 16 from Vanderhoof to Smithers. An exact vote count was not available.

Engineer Looks At New Crossing

DUNCAN — A Department of Transport engineer was scheduled here today to study the proposed site for a railway crossing to connect Queen and Ingram Streets, Mayor Jim Quaife said.

The city has been after a third crossing over the CPR tracks for many years.

Marathon Realty, a CPR subsidiary, will negotiate a lease with the city and then work can start, the mayor said.

The job is expected to be completed in March.

Winner in Recount

BURNABY (CP) — Bernice McDonough Tuesday won a Burnaby school board seat in a recount of Dec. 7 votes. The recount gave her 7,729 votes, two more than incumbent William Burke. Election night count had given Mr. Burke 7,704.
